FOREIGN FLASHES.

A Sorry Fizzle the End of the Naval Demonstration.

Bismarck's Project—A Fresh Rising Feared in Afghanistan—European News.

Germany.

LONDON, September 29.—A dispatch from Berlin says: The result of Bismarck's recent correspondence and interview at Friedrichsruhe with skilled economists and commercial experts is the projection of a bill, to be presented probably at the next session of the Prussian Parliament, aiming at the formation of a State Workingmen's Assurance and Mutual Assistance Society, to which laborers and employers will be bound to contribute. The system will be first tried in Prussia.

England.

DUBLIN, September 29.—Parnell addressed the Land League here. He commented favorably on the proposal to give tenant farmers perpetual leases at fair fixed rents, in the hope that in their then position of rent charges, the landlords would be frequently induced to sell their interest to the tenant.

TEXAN CATTLE FEVER.

LONDON, September 29.—Prof. Brown has presented his report to the Privy Council on the Texan cattle fever. He concludes by saying: "It is clear the splenetic fever of the Texan cattle is not the same disease as the splenetic fever prevalent in Great Britain."

Turkey.

CONSTANTINOPLE, September 29.—The Emperor of Germany, replying to the appeal made by the Sultan, expressed his regret that the necessity for executing the treaty of Berlin precludes separate action on his part.

A THREAT.

LONDON, September 29.—A Berlin despatch says Great Britain and Russia are urging the assembling of the International fleet before Stamboul.

Eastern Principalities.

LONDON, September 29.—A dispatch from Ragusa says three Turkish officers arrived at that place on Tuesday and go aboard the fleet to-morrow.

TEN DAYS LONGER.

GRAVOSA, September 29.—The general impression here is that unless unforeseen events occur the fleets of the Powers will remain ten days longer.

France.

PARIS, September 29.—Jules Jacquemart, the eminent engraver, is dead.

THE PAPAL NUNCIO.

PARIS, September 29.—The Papal Nuncio has had very courteous interviews with Barthelemy St. Hilaire, Minister of Foreign Affairs, and Jules Ferry, the Premier. The Nuncio has not even hinted the idea of quitting France. It is stated Baron Boissay d'Anglais, member of the Chamber of Deputies, has been appointed Minister to Mexico.

Switzerland.

GENEVA, September 29.—Col. Pedevilla, a member of the Appellate Court and president of the Court of Assizes, Canton of Ticino, was murdered by peasants at Sigirona, near Lugano.

Afghanistan.

LONDON, September 29.—A correspondent at Candahar says: It is a mistake to suppose the country is completely pacified. Ayoob Khan's victory gave a great impulse to fanaticism. The Mollahs are everywhere preaching a fresh rising and urging that the defeat of Ayoob Khan by General Roberts was owing to the reliance the Afghan leader placed on his regulars and their desertion at a critical moment.

A DISTINGUISHED FLOPPER.

Senator Jones, of Nevada, Severs His Connection With the Republicans.

He Will Oppose Sharon and Work for Fair for the Senate—Disgusted With Garfield.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, September 29.—The World's Washington special says: A letter has been received here from Senator Jones, of Nevada, which comes very near being what is now the popular line of letter writing. Senator Jones has always been a staunch Republican, or at least always was until quite recently. So what he writes is especially significant as revealing the real drift of political feeling among the class of Republicans to which he belongs. His associations may be judged from the elegant testimonial of their regard bestowed upon him last winter at Delmonico's, by the most prominent Republicans in the country. The present letter is written to a very intimate friend here. In it Senator Jones says bluntly and without reserve that he is tired of the Republican party, and has virtually left it. Had Gen. Grant been nominated at Chicago he would have exerted himself to secure his election, but with Garfield's nomination he was

DISGUSTED FROM THE START,

and what has transpired since has determined him to disconnect himself from any participation in the party's conduct. He will go farther than this in Nevada State politics by opposing the re-election to the Senate of Sharon and supporting Col. Fair, a Democrat. Senator Jones adds: "If asked his politics he would declare himself more of a Greenbacker than anything else." But he anticipates so much bitterness from the Republicans for his change of views that he shall not be surprised before the end of the campaign to find himself declaring himself a Democrat.

THEY BLEW OUT THE GAS.

And the Man was Found Dead in the Bed and the Woman Almost Dead.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

INDIANAPOLIS, September 29.—James Forster and wife came to the city yesterday from Laporte. They stopped at the Pyle House last night. On retiring, instead of turning off the gas they blew it out. This morning Forster was found dead in the bed and his wife nearly dead. There are no hopes of saving her life.

THE EPIZOOTIC.

The epizootic has broken out among the horses here.

Col. Clark Forgives Turfman Moore.

LOUISVILLE, September 29.—It will be remembered that at the fall meeting of the Jockey Club of 1879, T. G. Moore, the well-known turfman, after a quarrel with Col. Clark, shot at him, for which he was expelled from the track. The following regarding the matter explains itself:

To the Executive Committee of the Louisville Jockey Club:

GENTLEMEN—On account of the condition of the family of T. G. Moore caused by the action of your committee in retiring him from the turf and from assurances of apology and regret for his conduct I desire to have justice tempered with mercy and request that you will restore him to the privileges of the turf.

Very truly,
M. LEWIS CLARK, JR.,
President.

$950,000.

The Secret Fund Raised by the Republicans in the East.

It is to Be Used to Corrupt and Carry Indiana for Garfield—A Startling Slush Fund.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, September 29.—The Herald's Titusville special says a gentleman prominent in railroad and political circles and a Republican, stated positively this evening that for a week past the Republican leaders have been secretly at work among the business men of the Eastern cities raising money to be used in carrying Indiana at the October election. As a result of these efforts a fund of $950,000 has been raised among the bankers and Republican merchants of New York and Boston, and forwarded to the Republican managers of Indiana to be used in electing Porter and the rest of the Republican ticket. Wall street

WAS HEAVILY ASSESSED.

The work of collecting this money has been conducted with greatest caution and is known to but two or three persons outside of those engaged in it. The gentleman from whom this information was obtained is just from New York. He says that the necessity of Republican success in Indiana to Garfield's election has inspired the Republican leaders to take advantage of all that money can do to help their cause. This fund of $950,000 is regarded as the outcome of an offer made by Bob Ingersoll, which was that he would be one of 1,000 men to contribute $1,000 each to elect Garfield.

GEN. TORBERT.

Funeral Obsequies in New York this Morning.

NEW YORK, September 29.—The remains of Gen. Alfred T. A. Torbert arrived this morning from Florida on the steamer Western Texas, under escort. They were conveyed to the City Hall, where they lay in state in the Governor's room until ten o'clock. The room is tastily draped in mourning. The casket containing the body was enclosed in a heavy box and over this was placed a handsome black pall. Members of the Old Guard acted as a guard of honor. The following pall-bearers met the body at the City Hall: Gen. Daniel E. Sickles, Alex. S. Webb, Geo. B. McClellan J. B. McIntosh, Jno. M. Corsett, Chauncy McKeever, Gen. Wm. F. Smith and Admiral R. F. Wyman. At 10:30 the remains were placed in a hearse drawn by four horses and, escorted by the Old Guard and a detachment of six soldiers of the regular army, conveyed to Trinity Chapel, where the funeral services were held. At the conclusion of the services the remains were taken to the Pennsylvania Railway depot, Jersey City, where they were received by the Fourth Regiment of the New Jersey National Guards, which will act as an escort from New York to Philadelphia.

Among these in Trinity Chapel were Gen. Hancock, ex-Gov Jewell, Gens. Crawford, Wainwright, Davis, Jackson, Aspinwall and Anson McCook.

Gist; Comptroller-General, John Agnew; Attorney-General, A. J. Willard; Treasurer, J. H. Cook; Adjutant and Inspector-General, B. R. Elkins; Congressman from Fourth District, J. H. McLane. Jay Gould's Scheme.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, September 29.—There is good reason to believe that Jay Gould is now building barges in large numbers and sufficient to transport 500,000 bushels of grain daily down the Mississippi River, and three large elevators for New Orleans. Seligman, Heilman & Co. have been appointed his agents at New Orleans, and as soon as the barges are completed competition will open against the grain movement eastward.

A DOUBLE TRAGEDY.

A Farmer's Daughter Forced to Commit Forgery.

She is Then Murdered by Her Lover, Who Also Then Kills Himself.

WARSAW, INDIANA, September 29.—Miss Anna Chaplin, daughter of a wealthy citizen, was shot and instantly killed yesterday afternoon by G. L. Smith in the jail yard, who immediately shot himself, and both died together. Miss Chaplin had been put in jail on a charge of forging her father's name to a check for $250. Smith was also arrested, the girl having said he forced her to present the check. Smith had been admitted to bail, and yesterday by some means gained admission to the jail yard with the above result. Smith was a sewing-machine agent, married, and had two children.

Another Account.

WARSAW, IND., September 29.—A double tragedy occurred here yesterday evening. Last week Morse Chaplin, a wealthy farmer near here, caused the arrest and imprisonment of his daughter, a handsome girl of twenty years, and G. L. Smith, a sewing machine agent, who had won her heart and then forged a check on her father in her favor for two hundred and fifty dollars. She drew the money before the fraud was discovered. Smith was bailed out, but the father refused to give bail for his daughter, fearing with Smith. Yesterday afternoon Smith called at the jail and was allowed to walk with Miss Chaplin in the back yard. They had not been there long, when four pistol shots were heard, and when the jailor's family reached the yard the dead bodies of Miss Chaplin and Smith were discovered lying side by side, the smoking revolver still being in Smith's hand. Smith had a wife and two children and was trying to get a divorce.

SHE WOULD ELOPE

THE TROTTERS.

Second Day of the Meeting at Cote Brilliante.

Glorious Weather and Superb Sport—The Races.

The second day of the Fall Trotting Meeting opened as brilliant by as could be desired. The weather was perfectly magnificent and the track considerably improved. Yesterday it was somewhat cuppy, the rain of the day previous having soaked into the ground, and as there was not time to thoroughly scrape the track, only the upper crust was dry. The difficulties in this respect were not met with to-day, as the track was treated in every possible manner conducive to fast time. The attendance on the first day was much larger than was anticipated and gave evidence that the meeting would be a complete success. The general interest taken in the races was considerably augmented this morning, and many who have been indifferent up to the present time are now stirred up to a pitch approaching enthusiasm and excitement. This was shown in the pool rooms last night and this forenoon. The races booked for to-day, and which came off in fine form, were the 2:48 and 2:22 classes. In the first there were six and in the latter ten entries. The visiting turfmen are here in numbers and are liberally backing their favorites. Local sports do something in that line, but have not yet reached a point where they go over head and ears in the amusement. Kate Sprague and Piedmont were the favorites in the two races, selling high over the others in the pools, of which the following is a sample: 2:48 class—Kate Sprague, $25; Joe Bunker, $8; Donald, $6; field, $4. 2:22 class—Piedmont, $225; Francis Alexander, $25; Silverton, $25; Convoy, $20; Humbletonian Bashaw, $12.

The principal interest was of course manifested in the 2:22 class, which is composed of a very strong lot. Piedmont was a hot favorite, on account of his record, only one defeat being scored against him this season. Towards the close of the pools he was barred, and Francis Alexander sold favorite. The horses in the 2:48 class are also a good lot, and a warm contest was expected. Every owner and driver went in to win, and thorough confidence in the squareness of the races was firmly established.

Notes.

French pools don't seem to take as well as usual.

The beer saloons and restaurant are doing a smashing business, both in the sale of liquors and the destruction of glassware.

BIRD SONG.

Bird of mine, bird of mine,
Nestled on my breast,
Would you fly, oh, would you fly
To treetops in the west?
Bird of mine, the wintry wind
Will ruff your little crest;
But loving hands beyond the wind
Have built a dainty nest.
Fly, my bird! fly; my bird!
Beyond the storm is rest.

Bird of mine, bird of mine,
On the weary wing,
Do you droop, oh, do you droop
And half forget to sing?
Bird of mine, the snows fall fast,
And to your feathers cling;
But loving hearts beyond the blast
Await the song you bring.
Fly, my bird! fly, my bird!
Beyond the snow is spring.

ROAD AGENTS.

Profitable Operations of a Nevada Gang of Highwaymen.

From the San Francisco Chronicle, Sept. 14.

The stage road between Carson City and Bodie has, since the 4th of May last and up to the 5th inst., been a dangerous one to those whose business or pleasure forced them to make its journey. Stage robberies have not been infrequent, and the solitary horseman and foot-traveler have all paid tribute to the agents who infested this road. A score of times, between the dates referred to above, the stage plying between the two towns has been stopped, the treasure-box rifled of its contents, and the passengers forced to deliver at the muzzle of a shot-gun in the hands of a masked robber, while another man covered the driver with another shot-gun during the proceeding. Several attempts have been made to capture these two men, for it appears there were but two engaged, but they resulted in failure until the 5th inst., when one of the highwaymen was shot dead, and his companion, after securing the contents of Wells, Fargo & Co.'s box, escaped for the time being. About 10 o'clock on Saturday, the 4th inst., the up stage from Carson was stopped at a point between Sulphur Springs and Dalzell's, the box broken open and the contents abstracted. A short time before this robbery a man on horseback was waylaid and forced to yield up $20—all he had. The highwaymen then retraced their steps toward Carson until at a point about nine miles from Wellington Station, where they erected a barricade and awaited the appearance of the down stage, which reached the spot about 3 o'clock in the morning. There was, in addition to M. M. Tobey, the regular shotgun messenger, an extra guard, Tom Woodruff, aboard. Tobey was walking and tracking the robbers. Coming upon them suddenly one of the robbers said: "You're trying to sneak on us, are you?" and at the same instant fired, the ball striking the off leader in the head, killing him instantly. Another shot was fired at Tobey, but fortunately the bullet missed him. Tobey then told the robbers to stop shooting and come on, that nobody was firing at them. At the same time he backed down to the stage and secured his gun. He then went back of the lights of the stage, took a rest with his gun on the hind wheel and fired, killing the robber instantly. The other footpad on the other side of the stage was firing at Woodruff, who was inside the stage. Tobey then went across, and as he came from behind the stage received a bullet in his right arm, shattering one of the bones between the wrist and elbow, and rendering the arm useless. The robber then started and ran into some willows by the roadside, followed by Woodruff, whom he eluded, and returned to the stage, where he went through the box. While doing so he was constantly calling to his comrade, who was lying on the opposite side of the stage cold in death, to come and help him. Receiving no answer and imagining that something was wrong, he hastily rifled the box, overlooking in his hurry some $800 in coin.

Detective Hume, in Wells, Fargo & Co.'s employ, recently visited the spot and exhumed the body of the dead road agent, who had been buried where he fell. Hume examined the face of the highwayman, but failed to recognize him, and a search of his clothing failed to reveal anything but a mask, which was made of glazed oil-cloth. Whatever Hume discovered during his visit that could throw any light on the identity of the robbers he kept to himself until he returned to the city last Saturday, when he laid the matter before Chief of Police Crowley and Capt. Lees, to whom he stated that, from information in his possession, he had discovered that the deceased and his companion had been living in a house on Minna street. On Saturday evening Detectives John Coffey and W. S. Jones visited the house and took possession of a valise, sachel and other effects belonging to the highwaymen. These were opened, and a gold watch and chain and other other articles were found. Photographs of the deceased, whose name was Frank A. Dow, alias Keefe, alias W. C. Jones, were found. Detective Silvey and Officer John Wallace were then detailed to occupy the room and await future developments. The latter, having a case in court yesterday morning, was relieved by John Coffey. About 11 o'clock, while Coffey was in the act of overhauling a valise, he was interrupted by the ringing of the door bell. Opening the door of the room sufficiently to give them a glimpse of the front door, they saw it opened by the lady of the house, who recognized and spoke to the person who had given the summons. He stated that he had come to effect a change of clothing, whereupon she invited him to enter. As he came abreast of the room where Coffey and Silvey were hiding, they quickly stepped out and grasped the unsuspecting individual, whom they forced into the room, where they searched him and found a pistol, $2,500 in gold coin secreted in a belt around his waist, two certificates of deposit for $300 on the First National Bank, and 150 shares of the Tip-top Mining Company's stock. A roll of blankets which the fellow had with him at the time was opened and another pistol found. This weapon was identified as one stolen from a box of one of the stages that had been robbed.

The man was handcuffed and taken to the Central Station, where he was subjected to a long and rigid examination by Capt. Lees. In response to inquiries, he said that his name was Lincoln Anthony Sharp, a native of Missouri, and aged thirty-four years. He refused to tell where he had been within the past six weeks. The Captain has the information that within his period Sharp had visited the city. His dead associate he knew by the name of Frank Keefee, or Keith, which, he was not sure, and he made his acquaintance somewhere about Auburn, where he was looking for a job. The watch which was found in his room, he said, was given to him by Keefee about two or three weeks ago. This watch has since been identified as one stolen from E. B. Shaw, agent for Cutting & Co., on the 19th of June, when a stage was robbed on the Bodie road. Sharp during his examination frequently asked to have a charge made against him. He was informed that his anxiety on this score would be relieved ere long. To the questions regarding his previous occupation and whereabouts, he said that he had principally followed mining in White Pine, Pioche and other camps. The money found upon him he said was the proceeds of his savings. He had been on this coast about twelve years, and had worked for Turley Roe, John Allison, and others. He and Keefee had money on deposit in the San Francisco Savings Union, and had drawn it out some time ago. His dead companion never deposited any money under the name of W. C. Jones. In Sharp's valise were found the morocco mask which he wore in his robberies and a number of pieces of the material from which it was made. The following is a partial list of the robberies by Keefee and Sharp in May last: On the 15th of that month they stopped the Forest Hill (Placer county) stage, and robbed the passengers bound for Bodie. They collected six gold watches and jewelry from the passengers valued at $300, and also $300 in coin from the company. On June 14 they encountered a stage in the same place and robbed the company of $270, not molesting the passengers on this occasion. They came before the public again on the 6th of August, carrying off a booty of $1,500 belonging to the company, and relieved a passenger of a two hundred dollar watch. On August 31 they appeared once more upon the scene of their labors. The Virginia stage was midway between Bodie and Virginia City when the driver was accosted and commanded to "halt." Contrary to expectations, he did not obey, but dashed off. The robbers thereupon fired shot after shot at him, but the driver escaped unhurt. On September 2nd, as the stage was bound from Carson to Belleville, it was robbed of $50 and some packages of nominal value. It is stated that the amount of money realized by Sharp and Keefee from their various depredations aggregates over $6,000, besides large quantities of mining stock and other valuables.

MIRACLES IN ENGLAND.

Father Ignatius Describes Two Apparitions—A Monstrance and a Spirit.

From the New York Sun.

Catholic Ireland, it would appear, is not to be allowed to monopolize the miraculous apparitions which of late have attracted so much attention to various localities of the Green Isle, and of which frequent accounts have been given in the Sun. Their "separated brethren" of the English Ritualistic Church now come forward with an apparition in Wales. Concerning this latter event, we learn from the Irish Times of September 13, that the celebrated Father Ignatius, the head of the Protestant Monastery, has written in a Hereford paper respecting certain alleged apparitions at Llanthony, Wales. He says:

"This monastery was founded ten years ago, and on Monday, August 30, the events to be recorded took place. During the time of adoration before the Blessed Sacrament one person kneels in silent devotion for an hour before the shrine, after which another person takes his place. On August 30, while the senior brother was before the shrine, all at once, on looking up, he saw distinctly the silver monstrance appear outside the thick doors of the tabernacle. The monstrance is the vessel in which the Host is held at benediction. A school mistress from Hay saw the same apparition, neither person being of an imaginative turn of mind. The same evening four boys were placed in the reception ground after vespers, when one came running up to me saying, 'Dear Father, we have just seen such a beautiful spirit in Abbot's meadow.' I replied, 'Oh nonsense,' and resumed what I was about, when other boys came and confirmed the statement, saying that they had seen a figure of a woman dressed in white, with both hands raised. From head to feet there was a dazzling white light, oval-shaped, shining round the body. The apparation moved through the meadow. A boy named Foord, who was frightened, caught up a stick and said he would strike it if it came near him. The figure and the light, however, entered the hedge and remained standing in it. The boys afterward, on a strict cross-examination, stuck to the same details, one saying that he believed he saw the Blessed Virgin Mary. These are extraordinary but absolute facts, and the two apparitions which occurred on the same day seem most marvelous, as though God intended one to corroborate the other."

It is further stated that one of the "Brothers" in the monastery was cured of a violent face ache by the application of a dock leaf which grew in the meadow where the boys state they saw the apparition. This one of the rare occasions in which Protestants are found laying claim to any such supernatural occurrences; and it is said that the publication of such claims has created quite a flutter of excitement in English Protestant circles.

Ice Water Better Than Brandy.

From the Virginia (Nev.) Enterprise, Sept. 17.

Frank Smith, the sole survivor of the Imperial accident, was much improved in condition last night. His physician, Dr. Harris, is of the opinion that he will pull through, though he is cut and bruised from head to foot. He has a cut on the back of his head that reaches down to the skull and is nearly four inches in length; also, a cut above his right hip that reaches through into the cavity of the abdomen. He was able to converse last evening, though appearing somewhat drowsy in his actions. He said he could remember nothing about the accident; that it seemed to him as if he had been asleep. He could not rememher getting aboard the cage to start up. When brought up out of the mine, and still wandering in mind, he spat out the brandy that was put in his mouth, but when tried with ice water he eagerly grasped for it and drank it. Dr. Harris, seeing this eagerness, allowed his patient to have all the ice-water he could drink, and found that the effect was excellent. Heretofore it has been the practice to pour brandy into wounded men. The Doctor is now of the opinion that in many cases ice-water would do them more goed. All miners are used to drinking great quantities of ice-water in the heated levels. When an accident occurs to any of them down in the hot regions of a mine the chances are that, although unconscious, they are almost burning up with thirst by the time they reach the surface, and all they ordinarily get is brandy or whisky, which must heat instead of cooling them. Smith was standing on the upper deck, and when the cage began falling caught hold of the crossbar with both hands and raised himself clear of everything. His presence of mind saved his life. Of course, he was thrown violently to the floor when the cage stopped.

It appears, in regard to the tunnel connection between France and England, that the boring operation undertaken some time since at Sangette, on the French side, is not the beginning of the shaft from which the tunnel is to be bored, but is simply an experimental bore-hole, some 500 or 600 yards above the village and about 100 yards from the shore. It was found necessary, however, to suspend the work because of the too rapid infiltration of water, rendering essential the construction of a new pump of double the capacity of the first one—that is, one capable of raising some 700 gallons per minute. The actual shaft for the tunnel, when it is definitely begun, is, according to the plan now contemplated, to be sunk to a depth of 260 feet, the diameter of the bore being eleven feet.

GEORGE FEARN'S LONG SWIM.

Thirteen Miles Up the East River in Less than Four Hours.

From the New York World, 27th.

A swimming match, intended as a "benefit" to George Fearn, the English champion swimmer, who is about returning to England, was successfully carried out yesterday. The steamer Florence, recently brought from Newburyport and intended for an excursion boat, plying between this city and Flushing Bay, was hired and announced to start from Thirty-third street, East River, whence the swimmers were to start, and swim to the Pavilion Hotel, Flushing Bay. Fearn being one of them. The conditions were $3 entrance, any swimmer arriving at the Pavilion before Fearn to receive $100, and the second man, providing he arrived within five minutes after the first, $25. Three swimmers were ready at 12 o'clock—Fearn, a well built, athletic young man; James Williams, of Montreal, champion of the Lachine River and Lake Champlain, short, thick-set and middle aged, and Gustave Sondstrom, of Brooklyn, a muscular young giant. All wore swimming tights, and Sondstrom was the only one that oiled his body. At 12.04 the word was given, and Sondstrom plunged in first, Williams following as Sondstrom came to the surface. Fearn was the last, and took a good "header." When he rose to the surface he was some dozen yards in the lead, having passed his competitors while under water. The tide was running the last of the flood and in the swimmers' favor as they struck out, keeping the city side of the river to about Sixtieth street, when they crossed over and pursued their way well in-shore to Blackwell's Island. The first mile was made in exactly twenty minutes, Fearn leading about fifty yards ahead of Williams, who was fully seventy yards in advance of Sondstrom. Fearn used his over-hand or wind-mill stroke, swimming on his side, and cut through the water rapidly. Williams swam principally on the breast, and occasionally on the right side, and at all times made good headway. Sondstrom swam altogether on the breast, turning on his back occasionally for a rest. Fearn steadily forged ahead and opposite the Astoria Ferry led by nearly half a mile. Williams was about three hundred yards ahead of Sondstrom, who soon after got into one of the innumerable eddies at Hell Gate and was carried a long way back before he could get again into fair water. He took a long rest on his back, and when he resumed swimming struck out with a very powerful stroke, and for a short time rapidly reduced the lead Williams had gained on him. The meadows on Randall's Island, where a part of the hull and the boilers of the Seawanhaka still lie, were passed in exactly one hour, Fearn still maintaining the lead and Sondstrom again falling back, while Williams between the two appeared to be holding his own well. At Riker's Island a boat was sent off from the steamer to see that the swimmers were doing their work fairly, and it was then found by rowing steadily in a double-oar Whitehall boat that Sondstrom was eight minutes behind Williams, who was thirteen minutes behind Fearn. The entrance to Flushing Bay was reached by Fearn in two hours. Soon after entering the bay and about two miles from the dock Sondstrom and Williams, seeing no chance of winning, gave up and were taken into boats and rowed ashore. Fearn continued until he was less than half a mile from shore, when he got into a current against which he made very little headway for several minutes, and then he also was brought ashore, having been in the water for three hours and fifty-five minutes, in which time he had swam about thirteen miles. The men were given brandy and well attended to, after which they showed no signs of fatigue.

Acceptance of the Black Veil.

From the Cincinnati Commercial, Sept. 24.

The ceremony which took place yesterday morning at the Convent of the Ursulines, St. Martin's, Brown county, Ohio, was of extraordinary interest in itself, apart from the fact that one of the two devoted girls who gave their youth, their beauty and their accomplishments to religion was a daughter of a Cincinnatian, and the other the child of one of the most noted soldiers of the Republic. Of the three daughters of Gen. Rosecrans, Mary, the eldest, lies in the churchyard of the convent where she was educated, which she re-entered as a novice, becoming known in religion as Sister St. Charles, and whence she early went a professed nun, to her rest. The second, Lillie, is with her father on the Pacific Slope. The third and youngest, Anne, left the Ursuline school early and went into society, but upon her sister's death sought the same convent and asked to be put upon probation for the honors of the novitiate, into which she was received two years ago. At the same time the white veil was also conferred upon Ella, second daughter of Mr. D. J. Foley, of Cincinnati. Mary, another of Mr. Foley's daughters, has been for seven years in the convent of Notre Dame, at Worcester, Mass., where she is known in religion as Sister Mary Eustelle, and two others, Miss Foley and Miss Annie Foley, are young ladies in society. The two latter were present yesterday, as were also the father and two brothers, Mr. J. E. Foley, of Cincinnati, and Mr. J. D. Foley, an aspirant for the priesthood in the learned Society of Jesus. None of Miss Rosecrans' immediate family were present, but she may see them soon, as she has been chosen as one of eight sisters who are to follow two already gone to establish a house of the famous educational order at St. Rosa, Cal. One of Gen. Rosecrans' sons, now deceased, was a Paulist father. The other, the youngest child, is with the General. There are seventy-three nuns in the Ursuline Community. Only lately has the policy been adopted of founding other houses, the one about to be established in California being the second.

Nilsson's Selfish Husband.

Paris Correspondence New York Herald.

Talking of music, much disappointment must have been felt at Mme. Nilsson's determination not to go over to the United States with Mapleson this season. The reasons of her decision are very plainly and simply set forth in a letter which Mme. Nilsson's husband, M. Rouzaud, has addressed to Mr. Ulmann. M. Rouzaud informs Mr. Ulmann that he cannot go over to America himself and that he cannot make up his mind to part with his charming wife for any length of time, though the terms of the engagement offered her were perfectly satisfactory and the guarantees proposed by Mr. Belmont unexceptionable. M. Rouzaud's disinclination to be bereft of the companion of his joys and sorrows is hardly to be wondered at, however much it may be regretted. Can any man conscientiously declare he would think differently on the subject were he Mme. Nilsson's husband? It is not then from any scruples of distrust of Mapleson that Nilsson will remain in Europe this autumn. In his letter to Mr. Ulmann M. Rouzand expresses the greatest deference for the manager of Her Majesty's. "My wife," he writes, "would on no account forsake Mapleson, who has been her impresario for so many years. It would be downright ingratitude to do so. While Mapleson stands Christine Nilsson will stand by him, and I am sure that the Gyes would be the first to appreciate the delicacy of her conduct."

The Czar's Bad Brother.

From the Whitehall Review.

I congratulate the Czar on having had the moral courage, at last, to remove the Grand Duke Nicholas from the command of the Imperial Guards. His resignation ought to have been enforced long ago. For years Nicholas has cast discredit upon the Romanoff regime. His stupid blundering and gross selfishness in Bulgaria are known to every reader of Forbes' clever letters from the seat of war. But before this he was notorious for his misconduct, and since his return from Bulgaria he has outraged decency more. In 1875 the tradesmen at St. Petersburg petitioned the Czar that they might not be compelled to serve him, as they never received payment for what they sent to the palace. When the war broke out he was in deep disfavor at St. Petersburg—not a particularly pure place, at the best of times—because he insulted the Duchess, one of the most beautiful women of the Russian Court, by his flirtations with an actress. It was this lady he took off to the war with him and sustained in luxury while the soldiers around him died by hundreds for want of supplies.

On his return to Russia his conduct, indeed, was so bad that the Nihilists would not attempt to kill him. They said his misdeeds undermined autocracy faster than they could with their pamphlets. So they let him run his course, every week having the pleasure of chronicling some fresh piece of scandal. When Melikoff was made assistant autocrat Nicholas did his utmost to sap his power. The crafty Armenian did not attack him himself, but set the Cesarevitch against him. At the recent autumn maneuvers at Krasno Selo the Guards nearly revolted. Some had not been paid for months; many were starving. Melikoff induced the Cesarevitch to go down to the camp and inquire privately into the matter. The result was a battle royal at the palace. The Cesarevitch lost his temper; bullied both his father and his uncle; and in the end the easy-tempered Czar, to put a stop to further scandal, had to muster up sufficient courage to ask the Grand Duke Nicholas to resign the command of the Guards.

Rabelais.

From the Athenæum.

Since the effort to fit to real personages the fictitious characters of Rabelais was abandoned, little difficulty has attended those who have sought his meaning. Individual references may be still obcure. Not seldom, probably, they are purposely so. Nothing was further from the intention of Rabelais than to make his meanings so plain that he who ran might read. Whole pages of his work are mere nonsense, a tub thrown to the whale of the Parliament or the Sorbonne. Still, the purpose, moral, social, political, of Rabelais stands out as distinct for practical purposes as a beacon light. What thinkers have found in him that has reconciled them to his coarseness and induced them to wade through a mass of filth is now the property of the world. * * * In spite of his singular and, to men of northern race, inexplicable delight in cruelty, he displays a profound sympathy with humanity, especially with that portion of it which is feeble and oppressed. It may, of course, be said that cruelty was as characteristic as license of expression of the time of Rabelais. While, however, coarseness of expression was useful or indispensable to Rabelais as a protection, the same cannot be said of cruelty. Rabelais was an artist—a fact which escapes the attention of some of his commentators. It is easy, however, to believe that the care bestowed upon revision was due less to desire to avoid literary censure than to escape the stake. "Jusqu'au feu exclusivement." Rabelais was prepared to go, but the limits within which safety was to be found were laid down on no map. Parliament and Sorbonne were both dead against him, and if once his firm ally the King—Francis I. or Henry II.—failed to see the point of his jokes his chances were but poor.

In spite of the inexplicable condemnation of Rabelais—for which subsequent if inadequate atonement was made—by Voltaire, the opinion that Rabelais was a drunken monk, or that he accompanied the Cardinal Jean du Bellay to Rome in the capacity of a buffoon, is now wholly disregarded. Were it otherwise, the correspondence that now remains, small in bulk as this is, would serve to dispose of such a fiction. Had nothing of Rabelais been preserved but his correspondence, we should have been compelled on the strength of this to accord him the character of a man of keen and penetrative insight. With the evidence of his serious purpose supplied thus by himself must be accepted the proofs afforded of the estimation in which he was held by men of highest mark with whom he was thrown into intimacy.

Numerous as are the portraits of Rabelais, there is not one the authority of which is incontestable. Scarcely a town or chateau of importance is there in the districts between the Loire and the Garonne which does not boast the posssesion of one or more likenesses of the great Tourangeau. Most of these are, however, without a vestige of authority, and not a few are purely fantastic.

The Private Detective.

From the Hour.

It is very well known that the "private detective" in New York finds playing the spy his most profitable occupation. Many a man has been known mean enough to employ these creatures to dog the steps of his wife or to keep watch on his house, while some women degrade themselves by hiring them to follow their husbands. The detectives do business as spies on their own account as well, and, if they can manage to make any discovery by which the reputation or domestic peace of a man or woman of means might be affected, they blackmail their victim under a threat of exposure. Two years ago a respectable young man was assistant cashier in a city bank. He had a little money of his own, and foolishly frequented a gambling house. A private detective discovered this fact, and demanded money of him as the price of keeping the secret. The young man, who had never then misappropriated a dollar, yielded. He abandoned play, but the demands of the detective grew so exorbitant that his victim was at last driven to take money from the bank to meet them. The defalcation was discovered, and, although it was concealed for the sake of his family, the young man went abroad and died soon after the exposure.

Printing Bank of England Notes.

From the New York Sun.

A London banker, remarking upon the amount of labor and ingenuity expended upon the production of Bank of England notes, states that they are still made, as for generations past, from pure white linen cuttings only—never from rags that have been worn—and so carefully is the paper prepared that even the number of dips into the pulp made by each workman is registered on a dial by machinery, and the sheets are carefully counted, and booked to each person whose hands they pass. The printing is done by a most curious process—secret, of course—within the bank building; there is also an elaborate arrangement for providing that no note shall be exactly like any other in existence, consequently there never was a duplicate of any of the bank notes, except by forgery. It has been stated that the stock of paid notes for seven years is about 94,000,000 in number, and that, placed in a pile, the mass would be eight miles high, or, if joined end to end, would form a ribbon 15,000 miles long.

Journalistic.

Galveston (Tex.) News.

Gilhooly is talking about starting a new paper in Galveston, and was telling a friend about it. "You can borrow $50 and start a new paper," said the friend encouragingly. "You durned fool! if I could borrow $50 what would I want to start a paper for? I want to start the paper so that I can borrow the $50."

Marshalltown (Ia.) Statesman.

"Why don't you buy a power-press?" inquired several enthusiastic Democrats as we were taking our locked-up pages of type through the streets on a wheelbarrow to a steam printing press owned by a rich printing firm. Why don't we buy the Bardman House, Woodbury block and the public square? Why don't we raise h—l on $4 50? It is easy to do all these things provided you have the collateral, but at this writing we confess we have not enough money to buy a cheese-press. Printing Democratic papers in Iowa is like peddling peanuts in a graveyard.

A Lady Aeronaut's Narrow Escape.

From the Cortland Standard, Sept. 23.

Carlotta, the lady aeronaut who made a balloon ascension from the Chenango County Fair Grounds at the recent Fair, found herself in rather an unpleasant situation before she reached the end of her ride. She first landed on the farm of Simon Turner, in Preston, some five miles from Norwich, after a trip of about half an hour, during which she reached an elevation of two miles. Encountering a cloud of rain, she threw out ballast, and everything in the basket, but the balloon became heavy from rain, and, descending, dragged upon the top of forest trees, finally lodging on the top of a bass-wood tree 80 feet high. A party of men who were out hunting discovered her perilous situation, and proceeded to the rescue, which was no slight task. A long ladder was produced, and upon ascending the tree it was found necessary to cut limbs from it, and the lady was with difficulty rescued, after remaining in the tree-top for an hour and a half, in a drenching storm.

MY RIVAL.

Stately and proud she stood before me,
In her trailing velvets and jewels grand—
A delicate, fair patrician beauty,
The reigning toast all over the land.

Not fear nor shame was keeping me silent
As I gazed so eagerly into her eyes;
Every feeling was mute within me,
Stilled by a great and glad surprise.

I turned away and looked in the mirror,
Smiling at what was reflected there:
A small, dark face, eyes of hazel,
A broad, low brow, brown, waving hair;

A little figure, far from stately,
With something of quaint and childish grace,
The dark robe brightened by scarlet ribbons
That fastened a ruffle of dainty lace.

She is heiress to untold riches—
I've not a penny to call my own;
No one but he even calls me pretty—
Her grand beauty would grace a throne.

But my heart was throbbing with joy and sorrow
As I looked again at that face so fair;
Joy that he loved me, and deepest sorrow
For the woman to whom I had brought despair.

THE AROOSTOOK FRENCH.

Queer People Who Live in the Democratic Stronghold of Maine.

From the Boston Herald.

The Madawaska settlement in Maine comprises a strip of country lying along the St. John River, beginning at Hamlin, a half dozen miles from Grand Falls, N. B., and extending in a northwesterly direction fifty miles up the river. There are eleven towns or organized plantations with an aggregate population of something like 7,500, of which three-quarters or more is of French descent. The exiles from Acadia, immortalized in "Evangeline," were the first settlers in this valley, which, though in a higher latitude than Quebec, and oppressed by long and severe winters, of which some wonderful stories are told, is one of the most fertile and beautiful in New England. The original settlers and Canadians who have joined them occupy a wide strip of intervale land along the banks of the St. John.

Travelers have often described the manners of this simple people. They are as unlike the Yankees of fifty miles to the south of them as can well be imagined. They have no genius for accumulation, no desire for improvement. They were born without ambition, and enjoy life correspondingly. "The Lord got along well enough before we were born," they say, "and he will after we are gone." A New England man would call them shiftless. Their farming is of the most primitive order. There has been no change in the style of their buildings for a century and manufactures they have none. Yet they are industrious in their way. Their wants are few and easily supplied. A few months' work at lumbering in winter provides what ready money they see during the year. The traders handle less money than anywhere else in the country. Barter is the rule, not the exception. They are a happy people, and the strains of a fiddle, such as can frequently be heard by the traveler, will at any time keep a dozen of them in contented idleness for half a day.

They are religious, not to say superstitious. They are ardent Catholics, and the churches which they have erected are in striking contrast to the prevailing architecture. A convent and school on the New Brunswick side of the river are noted throughout the whole section, and the latter is well patronized by parents all the way from Grand Falls to Quebec. It is a sight to see the throngs making their way toward church of a Sunday morning. Some on foot, some on horseback, some in carriages which carried fashionable people half a century ago, some in gigs of the rudest home manufacture, here a half dozen in a wagon, there a large party in a hay-rack. They will start, many of them, three or four hours before mass, and drive all distances, from one to a dozen miles. The feast days of the church are celebrated as nowhere else in New England. After mass the priest gives notice of any coming occurrences likely to be of interest to his flock, such as the fact that a trader will be at a designated place on a given day to buy cattle, for the people, it should be remembered, have no newspapers, and could not read them if they had. After mass, too, when an election approaches, the candidates for office are allowed and expected to harangue the people from the steps of the church. One Sunday last year the writer saw the hat knocked from the head of a young Portlander who was standing, not in the church nor the vestibule, but some feet from the door, and intending no disrespect.

An hour later, mass being over, an eloquent native was addressing his fellow-citizens on his claims to an election as Representative from the very same spot. And this brings us to the matter of elections. The French vote has been practically solid for the Democratic party. James C. Madigan, who died last year, could control every man of them. In national issues little interest is felt. The speeches which are made deal chiefly with local and county matters. A representative to the Legislature who wants a re-election is held to a strict account for every act or vote of his which could have any bearing upon the welfare of the people.

He Wanted to Hang.

Sidney (O.) Special to Cincinnati Gazette.

The jury in the case of the State of Ohio against Conrad Rentanbauch, in the Court of Common Pleas, charged with the murder of J. M. Lehman, at Hardin Station, on the Bee Line Railway, returned a verdict of murder in the first degree. The evidence identifying the prisoner as the murderer was overwhelming and conclusive. The circumstances attending the crime were as follows: As the 3 o'clock local freight train, going west, passed through this place, a man, supposed to be a tramp, boarded the caboose. When out of Sidney the conductor, Dennis Murphy, demanded his fare. Rentanbauch refused, stating that he had no money. He was then told that he must get off at Hardin, the next station. At Hardin he left the cars, but as the train pulled out he got on again. The conductor and brakeman then put him off by force, but as the train started up again he drew a revolver, and, after firing at the brakeman on the top of the car, sprang on the platform, leveled his revolver, and fired through the rear window of the car, the ball striking a passenger, J. M. Lehman, who was sitting in his seat, entering near the right eye and passing through the brain. The murderer leaped from the train and disappeared in the woods. Lehman died in a short time after being shot. He was a young man, and had been married but about a month. During the trial, Rentanbauch exhibited the utmost unconcern, and when the jury was about to retire to their room, after receiving the charge of the Judge, he raised his chin, stuck out his tongue, and winked and motioned to the jury as if to say "hang me." The sentiment of the people is that the verdict is just.

Charlotte Corday's Bath.

From the London World.

A discussion has arisen in France as to the costume worn by Charlotte Corday when she stabbed Marat, and some modern ladies have pronounced her conduct shocking—not in committing a murder, but in killing a man in his bath. Modern modesty need not be shocked. In the later days of the old French monarchy ladies frequently received visitors while enjoying a bath. But there was no impropriety. They wore bathing gowns of the finest lawn, trimmed with Valenciennes; and the water in the bath was made opaque by the addition of a bottle of essence, or of a jug of milk. But for the name of the thing, they were more decently clad in the bath than in the ball-room.

Farming Under the Sea.

From the Boston Post.

Everywhere upon the coast of Eastern New England may be found, ten feet below the water-mark, the lichen known as carrageen—the "Irish moss" of commerce. It may be torn from the sunken rocks anywhere, and yet the little seaport of Scituate is almost the only place in the country where it is gathered and cured. This village is the great center of the moss business in this country, and the entire Union draws its supplies from these beaches. Long rakes are used in tilling this marine farm, and it does not take long to fill the many dories that await the lichen, torn from its salty rock bed. The husbands and fathers gather the moss from the sea, and the wives and daughters prepare it for the market. Soak it in water and it will melt away to a jelly. Boil it in milk and a delicious white and creamy blanc mange is the result. The annual product is from 10,000 to 15,000 barrels, and it brings $55,000 into the town, which sum is shared by 150 families. Its consumption in the manufacture of lager beer is very large, and the entire beer of the country draws its supplies from Scituate beaches, as the importation from Ireland has almost ceased. It is not generally known that the moss, as an article of food, is called "sea moss farina."

THE RETREAT OF JOSEPHINE.

Reminiscences of the Chateau Malmaison that is About to be Sold.

From Galignani's Messenger.

All the old historical French chateaux are gradually falling under the auctioneer's hammer or crumbling away in ruins. Chenonceaux, the favorite residence of Diane de Poitiers and Catherine de Medicis, now belongs to a Qepublican deputy who, two years ago, entertained there a number of the most fervent admirers of Paul Louis Courier, the arch-enemy of monarchs. Fouquet's palace at Vaux is now the property of a sugar refiner; Luciennes, built for Mme. Dubarry, is in the hands of a manufacturer; Sardou is the owner of the palace of the Montmorencys; a linen-draper has bought Chamarande, a gift of Napoleon III. to the Duke of Persigny; a score of others have had a similar destiny, while Meuden, St. Cloud and the Tuileries have been reduced to heaps of ruins. But the Malmaison is richer in attaching noble souvenirs than they all; it is the freshest oasis in the whole of Napoleon's career of devastation.

Madame Bonaparte bought the property in 1798 for the trifling sum of £6,400, and there it was that the future Empress Josephine spent the happiest and most sorrowful portions of her life. Her Thursday receptions form a picture of delightful repose in the midst of those busy, boisterous times. There she held a court surrounded by beauties, poets and artists, among whom were Bernardin de St. Pierre, Legouve, Joseph Chenier, Picard, Collin d'Harleville, Volney, Talma, Ducis, Lesueur, Girodet, Nepomucene Lemercier, whom, Republican though he was, Josephine won over to the cause of the First Empire, and a host of other men of talent. The charm of those Thursdays was still further heightened by the dazzling beauty of the future Queen Hortense, the Countess Fanny de Beauharnais, Mme. Tallien, Mme. d'Houdetot, Mme. Caffarelli and many others. The army of elite endeavored, by elegance of language, dress and manners, to stem the current of coarseness, brutality and violence let loose by the revolution. At times a thin, little man, with yellow complexion, hair lying flat on his head, and sparkling black eyes, might be seen talking in a retired corner with a general in uniform, and might be heard breaking into the general conversation, so elegant and so recherche, with a brusque, concise and decisive soldierly phrase. This was young Gen. Bonaparte.

It was at the Malmaison that the eighteenth Brumaire was prepared. It was there, too, that Lemercier read his tragedy of "Charlemagne" to the First Consul, who wanted him to change the denouement, so as to show the conquered nations coming to Charlemagne to offer him in great pomp the crown and empire of the East. The consulate raised Malmaison to its highest splendor, but no sooner had Napoleon become Emperor than Josephine's modest chateau was abandoned for the palatial magnificence of St. Cloud. After the divorce, La Malmaison became the Kimbolton of the modern Catherine of Aragon. The fallen Empress pined and died there during the first invasion. The allied sovereigns invited themselves to dine with her, and it was while showing the Emperor of Russia the grounds that Josephine caught the cold that carried her to the grave three days later. After Waterloo Napoleon revisited the scene of the only happiness he had ever known, and paid a nocturnal visit to the tomb of his once-loved Josephine. On leaving the Malmaison he went direct to Rochefort, where the Bellerophon was waiting for him. La Malmaison has, it is understood, been bought by a speculator, who intends to sell it in small lots. In future some thrifty peasant will no doubt sleep in the chamber where the conqueror of a world was about to seek repose.

A Reminiscence of 1812.

From the Boston Traveler.

Miss Rebecca W. Bates, of Scituate Harbor, one of the heroines of 1812, has just celebrated her eighty-seventh anniversary at the old homestead. Two sisters, Rebecca and Abigail, daughters of the light-house keeper at Scituate, played a part in the Revolutionary period as noteworthy as that of Barbara Fritchie. The light-house of the above period was made the scene of a fife and drum victory over an English blockade in Scituate harbor. Two American vessels were coming into the harbor laden with flour. As it was shallow the man-of-war was afraid to venture and manned two boats to pursue them. They were fast gaining on them when seen by Rebecca and Abbie Bates, when going out to pick up chips to boil the tea-kettle for the evening meal. The place was under the protection of "Home Guards," who, not apprehending any danger, were on a forage in a huckleberry patch. The girls had become familiar with ammunition and military music. Perceiving the danger, one of the sisters proposed to face the enemy with guns, but taking in the fearful odds, had recourse to a stratagem. They fled to a side of the light-house, so as to be concealed from the enemy, and one of them with stentorian voice called the roll. In an instant after Rebecca struck a martial air on the fife, and Abbie hammered on the drum lustily. The music reached the British, a flag was hoisted, and the two boats wheeled about, and in the act a seaman fell overboard, but was seized neck and heels and hauled in. The music also alarmed the absent guards, who returned in time to raise tumultuous cheers as the enemy were departing, the ladies playing "Yankee Doodle." These two sisters never married, although they had several proposals.

They were very industrious and could ply the needle and thread on any kind of garment, for male or female. Their family is remarkable for their longevity. Their father died when very aged, and their mother 87, and their paternal grandfather more than 100. One sister, Mrs. Jane Curtis, is in her 90th year, and another, Mrs. Hawthorne, is in her 79th. The house occupied by these two celebrities was built by their grandfather 140 years ago, and is in a wonderful state of preservation.

The Tribulations of a Lunch.

Bill Nye in Denver Tribune.

When the train started and we were saying good-by to our multitude of friends I got weary and sat down in the lunch basket. I had not fully decided where I would sit down till the car started, and then my doubts vanished. I almost instantaneously decided that I would sit down on the lunch. Of course I regretted it afterward, but how many acts of our lives, in the light of a chastened experience, we can see were not for the best. That's the way I felt when I got up and tried to shake off the mustard, pickles and jelly that I had so suddenly achieved but did not actually need. The place where I had sat down in my artless and impulsive way looked depressed and low-spirited. I never saw a lunch that seemed to be so depressed as that one was. Most every one laughed in a lady-like way, and I joined in the hilarity, although my laugh didn't sound so hearty as the rest. It was more of a hollow mockery, and there were traces of tears in it. Afterward, when other members of the party sat down in the lunch, I recovered my old buoyancy and effervescent gladness and gayety. Later in the trip we concluded to put the basket down under the seat, and all of us took a turn about putting our feet in it. This made a more pronounced and robust ruin of it than otherwise would have been.

RIVER NEWS.

THE Red Cloud is being made into a cotton boat.

THE Charles Rebstock was at Memphis yesterday.

THE Sam Roberts is being overhauled and repaired at Paducah.

DORA for Clarksville and the Gen. Rucker for Star Landing to-morrow.

CAPT. DAVIS will back out the Northwestern this afternoon for Keokuk.

JULIUS WEHRMAN, of the American Barge Line of St. Louis, arrived in New Orleans yesterday.

THE Clinton, Capt. Hall, leaves for St. Paul at noon to-morrow. The St. Paul packets are prompt in their departures.

THE Mary Morton, of the Diamond Jo L'ne, leaves for St. Paul this evening. Capt. John Killeen commands her and Charley Mason is clerk.

OWING to the rapid increase of river tonnage, it is supposed the St. Louis Board of Underwriters will need an additional hull inspector.

THE movement inaugurated in Natchez of placing a privilege tax on drummers, and which was quickly followed by Vicksburg, is spreading to still other parts of Mississippi.

BEAR in mind that Missouri River freight is being constantly received for the regular Missouri River packet Phil. Chappell, Captain Archie Bryan. She won't enter the Paducah trade.

GOOD water will get into the Ohio after November 6. A Pittsburg man in St. Louis says so. He adds that, owing to the extensive burning of powder, there was good water in all the rivers during the active period of the war.

THE Guiding Star is announced as the Thursday Anchor Liner for New Orleans tomorrow. Sternwheelers are still, we believe, on an equality with sidewheelers before the Underwriters, in the St. Louis and New Orleans trade.

CAPT. BRUNER and Major Jenkins will get the E. W. Cole, or some other excellent steamboat, for the St. Louis and Paducah trade, in place of the Fannie Tatum. The Cole would do well. So would the Red Cloud or some similar steamer.

The Florence Meyer was four years old, and her original cost was $20,000. She was valued at $12,000 and insured for $9,000 in Cincinnati offices. She was owned and commanded by Jas. Nichols, with J. J. Nichols and T. B. Elliott clerks.

PROBABLY our question in regard to Hatchie River improvement was a stepping on some one's toes—an improper question, in fact. Still it would be interesting to know just why no St. Louis party got a chance to bid on the Hatchie, Tennessee.

THE Calhoun on her last trip brought here, with the assistance of two barges, near 14,000 sacks of wheat. This is a nice cargo from the Illinois. Still, the fact remains that there is a woful lack of tonnage in that stream and an extreme necessity for enterprising young men to take hold of the trade.

MEMPHIS Appeal: Capt. Jim Nichols, of the lost Florence Meyer, has the sympathy of every one who knows him. It was a little hard—a good business season ahead, with a boat that would have made money hand over fist, and to drop her to the bottom just now is certainly tough lines. Try it again, old man; better luck next time.

EVANSVILLE, 28: The Grey Eagle did not get down till 7:45 a. m., having been aground two or three times in attempting to make way landings. The Fashion was detained by helping the James D. Parker off Puppy Creek bar. The Fashion left the Parker at Owensboro. The Evansville papers are trying to induce the Evansville packets to extend their trips to Memphis.

VICKSBURG Commercial: Quite a ripple of excitement has been created in this city by the discovery of a vein of unmistakable bituminous coal at Snyder's Bluff, in this county, some twelve miles above this city, on the Yazoo River. This discovery was made a few days since by Capt. J. H. Gunning, who has for the last three years been engaged in quarrying stone for use in the Eads jetties.

PITTSBURG Telegraph: Mr. Simpson Horner, it is pretty authoritatively stated, will not rebuild the Mary Ann or the Simpson Horner either. Mr. Horner is nearing his three-score years and ten, has accumulated enough of this world's "dross" to live in comfort for the balance of his days, and he proposes to withdraw from the New Orleans coal trade, at least, if not from the coal shipping trade entirely.

LOUISVILLE daily: How is this? As near as it can be estimated the number of lives lost during the fiscal year of 1880 from the different classes of accidents to which steamboats are subjected will not exceed 186 against 176 in 1879. And these figures don't refer to Western and Southern boats alone, but all boats everywhere. Most of the lives were lost on Eastern and Northern vessels. Now let the railroads of the country "show up" and see what is the safest to travel on—rail or river.

THE Golden City is the longest stern-wheel boat on the Mississippi, and is also one of the finest and fastest. She was built by Perry Tharp, at Cincinnati, for Capt. Hegler, three years ago, and has proven herself a success in every respect. She is 307 feet long by forty-one feet beam and seven feet depth of hold, and will carry 1,000 tons. Her draught is only twenty-five inches. She has four steel boilers, twenty-eight feet long by forty-eight inches diameter, six lap-welded flues in each, and cylinders sufficiently large to drive her at a lively rate of speed.—[Louisville Daily.

CINCINNATI Commercial, 28: The Telegraph, the lightest side-wheeler in the Pomeroy trade, and the Bonanza, have laid up. The Telegraph's season has been a good one. She came out November 20, 1979, and has not lost a day since. The old wrecks of the Highland Chief, at Craig's, the Thibedeaux, at Brooksburg, and the Tom Scott at Bryant's Bar, all well known to pilots, will receive attention by the Woodruff if she goes below on the anticipated low water cruise. Capt. R. R. Robinson, a former steamboatman, is here, having come from Allegheny City to attend the funeral of his brother-in-law, Capt. John N. Shunk. Capt. Robinson's last boat was the Kate Robinson. A weekly boat to New Orleans is what Evansville wants most.

NEW ORLEANS Democrat: Capt. Joe Lodwick first went to Red River in 1844 with the Douglass. A year later she went above the raft to Fulton and sunk on her way down at Buzzard's bar. In 1846 he built the Belvidere, the finest boat on the river in her day. "In 1849, during the epidemic of cholera, I was her clerk. We had a large number of emigrants aboard for Shreveport. The cholera broke out the first night out, and before we got to Grand Ecore ten or twelve had died. We had a large freight for that place, and in putting it out at night unfortunately a box containing one of the dead was carried ashore. None of us knew this until we landed at Campte on our way back, where we were told of it, and further, that the whole of Natchitoches parish were up in arms ready to lynch the captain. We passed by at night, didn't land anywhere, and made just as little noise as possible, and it took some time to convince the people that it was done unintentionally on our part." In 1853 he had the B. E. Clark, and retired from the river in 1856.'

1880. A MODEL MODERN NEWSPAPER 1880.

THE POST-DISPATCH

Of St. Louis.

DAILY AND WEEKLY EDITIONS

Consolidation of Three Newspapers in One.

The Evening Dispatch,
The Evening Post,
The Evening Star.

LEADING EVENING PAPER of the WEST.

A Democratic Journal Devoted to the Interests of Missouri.

PROSPECTUS FOR 1880:

The POST-DISPATCH has been and will be a Newspaper in the true sense of the word. It owns the exclusive membership and franchise in the Associated Press. In is in constant telegraphic communion with all parts of the habitable Globe. Its Correspondents are at all the principal Fountains of News, and spare neither Money, Labor nor Brains to be the EARLIEST, the most COMPLETE and the most RELIABLE Historians of the Incidents and Accidents of the Day throughout the World. It will maintain its Excellent Record of being the Most Thorough and the Most Accurate Chronicle of the Local Happenings of St. Louis, enjoying, as it does, facilities for gathering information which are not shared by any other journal in the city.

Editorially it will continue to urge good, old-fashioned Democracy as the only Rational System of Government, and in the coming struggle between IMPERIALISM and FREE INSTITUTIONS it will be found at all times in the lead, fighting the Battle of the People beneath the Standard of Law, Liberty and Local Self-Government. Though Democratic, our Democracy is preceded by an allegiance to Truth and Honesty, and, once convinced that truth to itself or honesty to the public demand it, it has proved in the past that it will spare neither censure nor rebuke within or without the party when it deems them necessary. Its principles are tolerably familiar to the people of the State, as they have been repeatedly and frankly stated, and on every question from hard, sound Money to Western Improvements everybody knows that a definite position has been taken and held.

THE WEEKLY POST-DISPATCH.

The WEEKLY POST-DISPATCH has been established to be to Missour what the Daily is to St. Louis, and the manner in which it has been taken up—evidenced by the surest of all testimony, the subscription list—shows that a progressive, enterprising, live Newspaper can command success in itself, without adventitious aid, and with no recommendation except that of innate and superior merit. The WEEKLY POST-DISPATCH has already become an institution which Missourians cannot afford to do without, for, in the character of its news and the practical value of all its matter, it is almost a necessary household article to every farmer or merchant in the country. The markets are brought down to the very moment of going to press, just a day ahead of any morning contemporary, for, in the nature of things, a paper printed in the morning cannot contain as late news as a paper printed in the evening and going out by the same evening's mail. The importance of this one consideration, were there no other, would be enough to place the WEEKLY POST-DISPATCH far beyond any competitor, for a day's intelligence from a fluctuating market may save or make a business. The Weekly is specially edited to give a complete history of the week brought down to 4 o'clock of the day of issue, each subject having its carefully considered space, and its proper application to the business, the domestic, or the social wants of its readers.

The year of our Lord 1880 opens with a promise of solid prosperity, the like of which has not been known since the War. The piping times of Peace in all their fullness and plenty foster industry and enterprise in the land. Every wheel that turns, and every share that rolls the mellow loam up to the ripening sun, is driven by the sturdy arm of a citizen whose vote will be cast in this crisis-year either to make this happy promise a permanent reality of true popular self-government, or to see in its stead a sham Republic, with its attendants of a military, personal, centralized Government, eternal sectional strife and certain Mexicanization.

The POST-DISPATCH will appeal during the coming year to the conscience and patriotism of all true Americans who would keep the sacred and revered fires of Liberty alight to rally to its support during a season which will witness the bitterest and the most important Political Canvass which the American Republic has been yet called upon to enter.

RATES OF SUBSCRIPTION.

The POST-DISPATCH will be delivered by carriers to any part of the city or sent by mail, postage prepaid, to subscribers in any part of the Union, on the following terms:

Daily, per week	20 cents.
Daily, per month	85 cents.
Daily, three months	$2 50
Daily, six months	4 50
Daily, per year	9 00

The carriers will collect the city subscriptions on their routes; all subscriptions by mail must be prepaid, and annual subscriptions will not be considered unless accompanied by the money.

THE WEEKLY POST-DISPATCH.

Eight pages; published every Thursday morning.

TERMS $1 PER ANNUM, POSTAGE FREE.

GRANT complimented Conkling at Warren yesterday as though he had been in the habit of borrowing money from him.

THE Republicans have raised a fund of nearly one million dollars in the East to be used in carrying Indiana. Happy Indiana!

NEXT week we are to have the great St. Louis Fair and the parade of the Veiled Prophets. Politics should be laid aside until after the great Carnival.

SIMON CAMERON has gone to Ohio to help Garfield hold the Buckeyes in line. It is his first public appearance since he clung to the railing in a Washington court-room and pleaded not guilty to the Widow Oliver's charge of breach of promise.

GRANT and Conkling met at Warren, Ohio, yesterday, for the first time since the former's return from abroad. The most magnificent orator on the planet embraced the most illustrious citizen of the Republic, and they wept down each other's backs.

IF the tariff question is to enter largely into the politics of St. Louis this year it would be well enough for the Republican candidates for Congress, Messrs. Fletcher, Rosenblatt and Sessinghaus, to define their views. The Democrats "hold the edge," so to speak.

DENIS KEARNEY, who seems to be about the only backer that Weaver has, addresses by telegraph the demented demagogue as the "Apostle of New Civilization." As Denis held that proud title until within a short time, it is presumed that the succession has been transferred by the laying on of hands.

BOTH factions of the New York Democracy met in harmonious convention at Saratoga yesterday, and John Kelly promised that the Empire State would roll up a majority of 30,000 for Hancock and his partner in November. We presume it is not necessary to add that J. K. is a man of his word.

LATE intelligence from the Pacific Coast confirms the rumor that Hayes and his dead-head tourists are having a good time. They were in Oregon at last accounts and had "received" several Sunday school receptions. In that far off region the people do not seem to have heard of Mr. Hayes' political crimes.

So long as one of the Knapp imbeciles holds a fat clerkship in the office of the Republican Collector the Republican will not be likely to tell the voters of the Second District how utterly unfit Mr. Rosenblatt is to represent them in Congress. They will have to find that out from such papers as the POST-DISPATCH.

THE greatest orator in the world (Mr. Conkling) stood up at Warren yesterday, and, notwithstanding the fact that "praise to the face is open disgrace," referred to Grant as the most illustrious citizen of the Republic. Ulysses sat there and heard it all, and we'll wager a steamboat against a stage-plank that he didn't blush a bit more than was the wont of the Colossus of Rhodes when a boat-load of picnickers passed between his nether limbs.

THE grateful and worshipful sons of Oakes Ames have gone out to Sherman on the line of the Union Pacific Railway to erect a monument to their distinguished Pa at an elevation of 8,000 feet above the sea. James A. Garfield ought to accompany them and assist at the ceremony, but it is doubtful whether he could conveniently do so. If Garfield swore to the truth in that Credit Mobilier business then Oakes Ames is a perjurer and doesn't deserve a monument. If Oakes swore truly then Garfield is a perjurer and ought not to be allowed in the neighborhood when monuments are being erected to deceased railway kings.

THERE was a time when it was General Grant's proudest aim to pose before the country as a Hero. Lack of appreciation on the part of the public seems to have soured him, and at last he has taken up the trade of the tramping politician. Yesterday he presided at a Republican mass meeting in Garfield's Ohio district and read a short speech, evidently prepared for him by Logan, declaring himself a Republican of the most pronounced type. The principal reason that he gave for his affiliation with the Republican party was his intense and patriotic desire to break up the solidity of the South. The distinguished statesman seems to have lost sight of the fact that the solidity of the South is chiefly due to the heroic efforts on the part of the Republicans to keep the North solid, and that if we are ever to have perfect peace and good fellowship it wouldn't be a bad idea for the North to fall back from its alarming and hostile attitude. As a matter of fact, though, Grant is an active Republican this year because Garfield has promised to give him fat Government employment in the event of his success.

AT Richmond, Virginia, yesterday, an elephant traveling with John Robinson's circus amused himself by maliciously murdering his keeper, one John King. As John had never given the elephant "terbacker," there was an absence of motive on the part of the beast, and his crime, therefore, is to be set down to pure cussedness. There is a general belief, chiefly fostered by showmen, that the elephant is a magnanimous, large-hearted, benevolent animal, and that he has great affection for the human family. He is supposed to have great ability in the matter of treasuring up a wrong, and whenever one of them kills his keeper or an innocent spectator the story is always set afloat that this particular unfortunate, at some period in his life, gave offense to the behemoth with the elongated snout. This is always a lie. The elephant is a cruel, treacherous, cowardly beast. In proportion to his size, he has less brain than any animal in existence. One look at his low, shallow forehead, his snaky, unintellectual eye, will convince any student of nature that no good can come out of him. Kindness is lost upon him. Like all other animals, he can only be kept in subjection through fear. Mr. Charles Reade, in his story of "A Jack of All Trades," explains the mysterious influence which drunken keepers have over the most ferocious elephants. They beat and abuse them and on the slightest appearance of bad temper on the part of the big brutes they stab them with a spear or sink a pitchfork up to the head in their soft flesh three or four times. This cows the cowards, and, while they display great ingenuity in killing other people, they treat their plucky masters with great tenderness and solicitude. It is more than likely that John King, who was killed yesterday, had spared the pitchfork and spoiled the elephant.

IT has been apparent all along that the Republicans meant to take some mean, underhand advantage of their opponents in the coming election, and at last they have shown their hand. They have "dropped the pigeon" on us and we are afraid the game is up. It is announced officially that a carrier pigeon upon whose wing was stamped the name of "Garfield" reached New York all the way from Indiana the other day, safe and sound, while three others, named respectively Hancock, Arthur and English, are still wandering in the upper air somewhere between Pittsburg and the metropolis. This settles it. If they had just held off their pigeon business until after the Indiana election it wouldn't have mattered so much, but it is apparent that they do not mean to do the square thing; that their purpose is to give us no show by this wicked forestalling of the returns.

THE Guardian, a weekly journal published at Jackson, Kansas, has reached this office. It is printed upon a half sheet of wrapping paper, with a choice assortment of type out of the bell-box, and its ram-shackle appearance brings up the fondest recollections of the newspaper business in Secessia during the recent difference of opinion, when the Fourth Estate came out on illuminated wall paper and horse-shoe nails. Outside of its unique typographical effect the Guardian is a success. It bristles with Democracy and its humor is of the broadest and most perceptible kind, especially where it speaks about a young trapeze actress coming down a rope bottom-side up. The Guardian deserves to succeed, and it will if the editor don't run out of slugs and patent medicine cuts. It is up-hill work printing a Democratic paper in benighted Kansas.

MR. THOMAS COLLIER, of England, has lately received a letter from Lieutenant-General Sir Thomas Ponsonby explaining that while the Queen sometimes gives £3 to the mothers of three children at a birth, she only does so when the children survive long enough to cause expense and the parents are respectable but poor. Mrs. Collier has had five children in twelve months and seven in two years, and it is alleged that the Queen fears that she has contracted a habit that will make her a too frequent pensioner. Victoria likes things in reason, but when she is crowded she is very apt to free her mind. Over-population is apparently what she fears in the Collier family and she is trying to discourage such literary efforts.

TO-DAY is the silver jubilee of Rev. Bro. James, the president of the Christian Brothers' College. For twenty-five years he has been in the harness, doing his duty, and the occasion has been seized by his many friends for testifying their appreciation of his character and their sense of his services to Catholic education in a substantial manner. It is to be hoped that his golden jubilee will be celebrated by the same circle of friends that will gather around him this evening, and that he and they will grow gray together in their present field of usefulness.

THE telegraph this morning comments on Riza Pasha's flippancy to Admiral Seymour. There must be some mistake about this. A Turk's idea of flippancy is pounding a man on the head with a rail maul or bagging a woman up in a sack and dropping her in the Bosphorus. If Riza Pasha is going to be flippant we would like to know it in time to keep out of his reach.

MISS JOYCE, the red-headed New York girl who ran away from her rich parents because her lover had been forbidden her palatial home, has sneaked back, penitent and broadened as to her views of life. She disguised herself and twice boarded a Staten Island ferryboat for divers purposes, but each time her courage failed her. Finding that her lover was not giving himself the least concern about her disappearance, she went home and gave in her adhesion to her father's doctrine touching the worthlessness and meanness of the young man.

EVEN our ablest editors in the heat and excitement of controversy sometimes mangle Shakspeare. Mr. Howard Briggs, of the Greencastle (Ind.) Press, in a recent political card, quotes as follows:

Like to the Pontic sea,
Whose icy current and compulsive course
Know no retiring ebb,
But keep right on to the Adriatic and the Hellespont.

Shakspeare says: "Ne'er feels retiring ebb, but keeps due on to the Propontic," etc. Somebody should hold the book on Briggs when he has one of his classic fits.

LAWRENCE BARRETT opened Mr. English's new opera-house in Indianapolis on Monday night. As Mr. E. is a tyro in the show business he can hardly be expected to know a Jonah when he sees one.

A CARD.

To Our Friends and Patrons.

In order that you may be enabled to examine at your leisure and appreciate the magnificent collection of Objets de Vertu, Precious Jewels, Solid Silverware, Watches, and other articles of personal and household adornment with which our establishment is crowded, comprising our late selections from the Eastern factories, and our fall importations from Europe (selected by our Mr. C. F. Mathey, who has just returned, whose æsthetical taste is universally acknowledged), we will, on Friday evening, October 1, at 7:45 p. m., brilliantly illuminate our establishment, and place our rich, rare and costly jewels and other attractive articles on exhibition, and we will be pleased to see and welcome you, and can promise that the exhibition will be worthy a long journey to inspect.

Our country friends are also cordially invited. There will be no goods sold during the evening, and in order to make our final preparations we will close our establishment at 5 p. m. on Friday, and parties having business with us on that day are requested to transact it before that hour.

PERSONAL.

—Commodore Vanderbilt's widow is said to have an income of over $50,000.

—Lieut. Schwatla's thrilling narrative reads like the story of a trip to Charles Francis Adams.

—Fanny Davenport and her "American Girl" are not doing as well as could be expected.

—Marshal McMahon, ex-President of the French Republic, denies the report that he is in ill-health and pecuniary distress.

—Hayes will go around the world next year. Foreigners will soon begin to think that these tours of ex Presidents constitute the worst feature of a Republican form of government.

—General Noyes, who has been living at a Parisian hotel since his return from his Asiatic tour, will soon be keeping open house again, and Mrs. Noyes will resume her Monday receptions.

—Mr. Holman Hunt's new painting, "The Flight into Egypt," on which he has been engaged for two years and a half, will not be completed before next summer. He works with great care and deliberation.

—Sherwood, a valuable estate of 1,725 acres, near Hampton, Va., has been sold to Mr. Jones, of Surry county, for $8,005. A few days before the war the late George Rooker, the owner, refused $75,000 for Sherwood.

—A Pennsylvania politician who had suddenly become very wealthy recently attended a dinner party at which there was the usual fillet of beef with mushrooms. While engaged upon the beef he whispered to his neighbor, "Do you eat the clothes-pin heads, too?"

—The engagement of Secretary Evarts' daughter, Miss Minnie Evarts, to Mr. Tweed, one of her father's law partners, is announced. When asked for his consent to the engagement the Secretary departed from his usual custom of answering in writing, not wishing to unnecessarily postpone the happiness of the young people.

—The correspondent of the Hartford Post conversed recently with Mrs. Hancock. She said she read Republican papers exclusively, because the Democratic papers, which spoke only in praise of her husband, were too monotonous; besides she wanted to know what her husband had been doing all these years. Gen. Hancock, since the office-seekers began the hunt for place, has lost thirty pounds, avoirpois.

Let Jeems Explain.

From the Chicago Times.

Congressman Garfield has generally voted for subsidies in land and cash. Will President Garfield veto subsidy schemes? He should be heard from on this point.

What Worries Banks.

From the Boston Post.

Banks, too, is afraid business will suffer if the Democrats come into power, and Banks knows what it is to suffer.

The Mysterious Rascal.

PUBLIC OPINION.

The Fair Grounds.

ST. LOUIS, September 29, 1880.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

Will you be kind enough to inform me through the obliging columns of your esteemed paper, whether the "Fair Grounds" will be open to the public on Sunday, the 3d of October. I saw it stated in the papers that the concert given on last Sunday was the last of the season. This is for the information of strangers who would like to improve of the occasion of seeing the animals fed, etc.

Yours truly,
JULIUS WIEGER.

[The Fair Grounds will not be open to the general public next Sunday.—ED. P.-D.]

Ascalon Serenade.

Last night members of the Ascalon Commandery Knights Templar, with the Arsenal Band, serenaded some of the members of the order. The party were in carriages and the festivities were lit up with a calcium light on the top of an omnibus. Visits were made and entertainment received at the residences of A. W. Soper, E. K. Sibley, R. P. Tansey, E. L. Dudley, O. W. Avery, W. H. Monks, Moses Rumsey, Will Robinson, J. H. Krippin, Fred. Williamson, Capt. I. M. Mason, Capt. Rosenthal, W. J. Smith and John B. Fleming.

"ONE SHOT, AND IT'S OVER."

Jacob Thomas, a Despondent German Cooper, Kills Himself.

His Wife Sleeps Beside the Dead Body All Night Unconscious of the Fact.

"Jacob Thomas, a cooper, 51 years, committed suicide at his home, No. 220 Lesperance street," was one of the messages telegraphed to police headquarters from the Second District Station this morning. A POST-DISPATCH reporter was soon at the number indicated. The house, a neat little one-story brick, was closed. In the front room and about a bed stood a dozen neighbors, some weeping, others turning away in disgust. On the bed lay the body of a powerful man, nearly six feet in height. In his right hand the rigid fingers tightly grasped a small-caliber five-chambered revolver. From a small spot of clotted blood on the left side of the dirty white shirt a small stream of blood trickled down toward the chest. Nothing more could be seen at first sight. Under the head thick black blood poured from a small hole in the temple down under the body, soaking the mattresses. From the crowd the reporter searched out the dead man's wife and from her obtained the following which she related in German: "I always expected he would do this. He was always talking about killing himself or somebody else. Maybe he was right, but a good man wouldn't think of killing himself for no more reason than he did. He was born in Germany and is a cooper by trade. Once we were pretty well off, but then he began to stop paying his debts, he began drinking very hard and we got worse and worse, and now he goes and kills himself. We bought this little house and lot, but did not pay for it in full. He was thinking that we could not pay off any more of the debt and this often depressed him. He was very cross and always spoke of killing himself. He went to his daughter-in-law a few months ago and told her that he had except one of his sons, whom he loved better than anybody else in the world. Once he said he would shoot himself if we did not buy him five cents' worth of beer. We bought the beer and then he did not say anything more about it. He was quarreling with all of us; he said he would kill one of the boys who does not work because he stayed about the house. He fired a shot at him once but did not hit him. I always knew he would kill himself but I did not think he was going to kill himself last night. He came home about 2 o'clock yesterday afternoon and he was very drunk. I did not say anything to him, because he used to beat me when he was drunk and I made him mad. After staying about the house he went into the front room and shut the door. He said he wanted to go to sleep. About 4 o'clock I heard a great deal of noise in the room as if he was shoving things about, but I would not go in, for I was afraid. Between 5 and 6 o'clock in the evening I heard a great deal of noise again, and afterwards a pistol shot. I did not go into the room then, either, for I thought he was cleaning or handling his pistol as he often used to do. I did not open the door at all. Everything was quiet again and I looked into the room about 8 o'clock and saw him lying on the bed. He did not light the lamp at all. He was lying on the right side of the bed just in the same position he is in now.

STORY OF THE SUICIDE,

NOTHING IN THE WORLD TO LIVE FOR

I THOUGHT HE WAS ASLEEP

and did not want to wake him. A little while after I went in myself, and after I undressed I went to bed beside him. He had his revolver in his hand, but I saw he was not awake, and I am so much afraid of firearms that I did not touch it. Soon after I lay down I went to sleep, and did not wake until this morning, when I looked at him more closely. I then saw he was dead. As soon as I could dress I told my neighbors about it, and they told the policeman. He must have killed himself yesterday afternoon between five and six o'clock. when I heard the pistol shot and I slept beside the dead body all night. Oh, I hate to think of it. Despondency on account of not making much money and drink was the only cause I can think of for his committing suicide."

After many questions she said that her husband and one of her grown sons were on very bad terms and had frequently made serious threats against each other, but she was positive that he had killed himself at the time and under the circumstances given above. Suicide was his whole thought, and a number of his acquaintances who called to look at the body said that he was continually speaking about it and remarked what an easy thing it was to do. "One shot," he frequently said, "and all this trouble is over." He leaves a family of five children, four of whom are grown. His bad temper had made a wide separation in the affections of the family and the father, and undoubtedly had much to do in somewhat unsettling the mother's mind.

THE æsthetical and cultivated taste of our citizens will be gratified by inspecting the artistic collection of Potteries, Bric-a-Brac, Bronzes and Silverware that will be displayed at Mermod, Jaccard & Co.'s (Fourth and Locust streets) opening on Friday evening, October 1.

DEMOCRATIC BARBECUE.

Mass Meeting and Rallying of the St. Louis County Democrats To-morrow.

The Democrats of St. Louis county are outstripping all their neighbors in getting up a grand ratification mass-meeting and barbecue. The affair is to come off to-morrow at Mt. Olive, eight miles out on the Olive Street road, and is being gotten up regardless of expense and trouble. Two pits, each 75 feet long, 2 feet deep, have been dug, over which will be roasted, in old-fashioned style, 30 lambs, 30 pigs and five whole steers. Fires were built last night at 12 o'clock that the pits may be filled with coals by morning, over which to roast the meat.

It is expected that the good people of the county will be on hand by thousands. In addition to the regular speakers already advertised, Senator Vest, who is in the city, has agreed to be on hand and address the assemblage. The crowd will be a select one, composed of the families of the best citizens in the county, and as large numbers from the city have announced their intention of be present, the music, dancing and speaking will not go begging. The Republicans of the county, what few of them that are left, are dying of chagrin and disappointment, and it is intimated that the pits, after the barbecue is over, will be used for burying them in.

The Veiled Prophets.

There will be no display of fireworks from the Court-house dome on the night of the Veiled Prophets' pageant. That conclusion has been definitely arrived at. The display will take place in the open space at Twentieth and Pine streets, and will be under the direction of Prof. Jackson, the great Philadelphia pyrotechnist. Four thousand seats will be erected for the accommodation of the public, tickets to which can only be secured at Balmer & Weber's. The pageant will move from Twelfth street, west on Pine to Twentieth, north to Washington avenue, east to Fifth, south to Elm, thence to Fourth, north to Washington avenue, east to Third, south to the Chamber of Commerce, where the prophets alight and the floats pass on and away into the darkness. A reporter of the POST-DISPATCH, who peeped through a knot hole in the den of the prophets' minions this morning, discovered the "floats" all completed, and in the light of the memory of a half-dozen Mardi Gras displays at New Orleans, the Elks and the Mystic Order of Memphi, at Memphis, and the two wonderful pageants given in this city by the Veiled Prophets, is prepared to say that the forthcoming pageant will be worth crossing a continent to witness.

I HAVE dissolved all connection with Sixth and Olive. The only place to buy my celebrated candies is at 412 Olive st.

P. OAKES.

Additional Political Notes.

Cornelius McBride, at present Deputy Coroner, has developed as a candidate for the Republican nomination as Assistant Prosecuting Attorney.

John D. Johnson is without a competitor for the Republican nomination for Circuit Judge, Judge Gottschalk having refused to run against him.

Senator George G. Vest, Col. Thos. T. Crittenden, R. Graham Frost and Martin L. Clardy will make speeches at the Mount Olive barbecue to-morrow evening.

Otto D'Amour, a prominent druggist, was last night nominated by the Republicans of the Sixth Ward for School Director. Taking into consideration the interests at stake, his opponent, Mr. White, will have his hands full to save his distance.

B. F. McDaniels, of Saline, one of the Democratic leaders of the last Legislature and the Democrat who, to preserve harmony in the district, withdrew in favor of Gen. John B. Clark, is in the city on business, and is stopping at the Laclede.

THE BRIDGE FIGHT.

A Compromise Effected Between the Missouri Pacific and the City.

The apparently interminable war between the city and the Missouri Pacific Railway Company, with reference to the bridging of Jefferson avenue and other streets and looking to the lowering of the tracks of that company in the western suburbs, has at last put on a favorable phase, and to-day the end is almost in sight. At a meeting of the Municipal Assembly, last night, both houses passed the bill on this subject, which has long been before it, but which has been fought so bitterly by the railroad company. At the same meeting a proposition was received from Mr. Talmage, Superintendent of the railroad, making an entirely new offer and one which will eventually be accepted. The proposition is embodied in the form of an amendment to the bill passed. No action was taken by either house on the amendment, for the reason that it was introduced too late to allow its provisions to be properly examined. The amendment was postponed to the regular session, which begins on the 16th of October. This amendment of Mr. Talmage has been examined by the Mayor, the City Counselor and Street Commissioner, and is thought by them to be a fair and favorable proposition. Counsellor Bell told a POST-DISPATCH man to-day that the amendment as drawn up by Mr. Talmage will be passed without opposition. The substance of the document is about as follows: The grade of the present crossing of High street is to be lowered five feet; at Naomi street the grade is to be lowered two feet ten inches; at Jefferson avenue four feet four inches. The company will have the work done immediately, as soon as the necessary ordinances can be passed. In making this proposition, however, the railway company withdraw their proposition to pay the city $150,000 on account of building five bridges and all propositions hitherto made by them in this matter.

The men are still at work to-day at the Jefferson avenue crossing, and are protected by the police, as before. They will probably be kept at work for a few days until there can be further negotiations between the parties interested. The two suits against city officials for heavy damages, brought by the railway company, have not yet been withdrawn, but probably will be eventually. Mr. Talmage and Judge Portis, his attorney, left for the West last night, and hence nothing could be learned from the railway side of the case.

More Litigation.

The City of St. Louis to the use, of the Missouri Pacific Railway Company, brings suit against Mr. Thos. J. Whitman and his bondsmen, Edwin Harrison and Albert Todd; against Col. Henry Flad and his bondsmen, Chas. P. Chouteau and Eberhard Anheuser; against Chas. Pfeifer and his bondsmen, Carl Daenzer and Jacob Tamm against Eugene F. Weigel and his bondsmen, Frederick Hill and Emil Preetorius; against Robert Moore and his bondsmen, George E. Leighton, F. M. Keferstein and G. C. Moore, against John W. Turner and his sureties, J. L. D. Morrison, Charles P. Chouteau and Charles Parsons. All of these suits are on the official bonds of the city officers mentioned above, are for different amounts, and all grow out of the Jefferson avenue bridge imbroglio.

BELLEVILLE.

Coroner Bader, of Belleville, was in East St. Louis to-day on business and "hustled" around in his usual active manner.

Several indictments were presented by the Grand Jury to the court yesterday, and more will, it is expected, be handed in soon.

Several cases of importance are before Judge Snyder, but it is probable that they will not be decided before the latter part of the week.

The city was to-day crowded with East St. Louisans, and beyond the business brought to the city by them nothing of importance occurred.

The Democrats in Belleville are energetic in their efforts to make the campaign a lively one for the Republican brethren. There seems to be a very explainable lack of enthusiasm on the part of the "brethren."

Belleville is very lively at present in consequence of the influx of business, the natural result of the session of the Circuit Court. The saloon-keepers especially are satisfied, and that death-dealing beverage disguised under the name of Belleville beer is administered to freely both members of the bar (legal) and their clients.

The three murderers, Loughlin, Trulock and Tremaine, who are at present lodged in the Belleville jail, will no doubt be indicted at this term of the Circuit Court. Counsel employed on behalf of each of the "homiciders" are making strenuous efforts to obtain evidence to bring them out safely at their trials and save their necks.

ABOUT TOWN.

THE Board of Directors of the Merchants' Exchange held a brief meeting this afternoon at 2 o'clock, at which two or three disagreements between merchants were settled.

THE Eclipse Base Ball Club, of Louisville, champions of Kentucky, will be here next Sunday and have a friendly tilt with the Browns. As each nine has won one game from the other the third and last game will, no doubt, be hotly contested from start to finish. A Maxwell dead ball will be used.

FOR the last few days applicants for space in the mechanical department have been steadily refused, every available spot of ground being occupied. To-day eighty feet in this department has been vacated. Parties wishing to secure space should call immediately at the office of the Fair Ground Association.

ABOUT half-past 12 o'clock to-day, on the corner of Second and Olive streets, a team belonging to Fox, Corby & Co. ran away, breaking a horse's leg, bursting the shafting and damaging the wagon considerably. The horse and wagon belong to Mr. Biekert. Officer Fenlon caught the runaway team and restored it to the owner.

AT 1:30 a small fire occurred in the rear of 909 Park avenue. An ash box at the back of Emile Schleter's residence took fire and threatened to burn the fence and woodshed. A few buckets of water speedily subdued the flames. A few dollars will cover all damages. The engines responded to the alarm, but their assistance was not needed.

BY attending Mermod, Jaccard & Co.'s (Fourth and Locust) opening on Friday evening, October 1, our citizens will learn to what perfection in beauty of design and exquisite finish the manufacturers of Silver-Plated Ware have attained.

New Warrants.

Billy Meek, living at 1417 South Eighth, charged with assault and battery, was committed to jail to-day on a warrant sworn out by Hugh McGuire. On the same accusation John Meyers was arrested, and Mrs. Elizabeth Davis making the complaint. Samuel Deliotis and Jonn Greeley, charged with assault and battery by H. F. Harris, were committed to the custody of the jailor. Officer Jacobs took out a petit larceny warrant against Michael McQuade and John Evans, who are accused of stealing two shirts from Michael Potthoff.

The Meyer Inquest.

The Coroner to-day continued the taking of testimony in the inquest over the body of Henry Meyer, who died from stabs received on Twelfth and Cass avenue on August 28, inflicted by some unknown person. Louis Meyer, who was present when the disturbance occurred, testified that he saw no knife with any one, and that Broderick, who was arrested on suspicion, was the first one to open the conversation which resulted in a free fight and in Meyer receiving a fatal stab. Other witnesses will be examined to-day.

New Buildings.

Charles Quade will build an $800 brick stable on Bryan avenue, between Second and Third streets.

P. Dinker has obtained a permit to erect a two-story brick dwelling on the north side of North Market street, between Sixteenth and Seventeenth streets, to cost $2,800.

THE SLOP CONTRACT.

What it Costs to Clean Away the Garbage.

The Profit and Loss Account of the Contractor.

The City Counselor Discourses on the Situation.

The question of how the Board of Health will award the slop contract is one that is producing a great deal of discussion throughout the city. The article in yesterday's POST-DISPATCH occasioned considerable comment upon the streets. The facts in the case were for the first time plainly put before the public, and the result is that few people believe that the Board of Health will do anything but their plain duty in the case and award the contract to the lowest responsible bidder. The Board has called for new bids upon October 12th, and the topic will probably be thoroughly ventilated by that time.

A reporter this morning met Mr. Morrissey and asked him what he proposed to do about the matter, whether he was going to put in a new bid or let the affair go by default and seek a legal remedy.

"I don't yet know what I shall do," said Mr. Morrissey. "If Mr. Donovan advises me to put my bid in again I shall do so; otherwise not."

"I wish you would tell me just what it costs to remove the slops."

"I can tell you what it has cost Mr. Hardy."

"That will do."

"Well, in the first place, you know, there is a great deal of difference in the amount of slops in different seasons. During watermelon time there is the greatest amount of work; during a hard frost there is actually none at all."

"How large a force is employed?"

"During the watermelon season there have never been more than thirteen carts employed; that is, about two months. Before and after that season, altogether about five months, there is an average of eight carts employed. For the remaining five months of the year not more than four carts have been employed; and, as I said, for a week or two none at all are sent out."

"What does it cost to run a cart?"

"In the first place, you have to pay a man a dollar a day; that is thirty dollars a month; feed for the horse will be ten dollars, and horseshoeing and general repairs ten dollars more; altogether fifty dollars a month. Now, if you will look at this for a second you will see just how much it comes to;" and Mr. Morrissey figured out the following tables:

Carts.	Months.	Amount.
13	for 2 at $50 per month	$1,350
8	for 5 at $50 per month	2,000
4	for 5 at $50 per month	1,000
	Total	$4,350

"Now," he continued, "thirteen carts would be worth $47 each, or $611. Thirteen plug horses could be bought for $100 each, equal to $1,300; harness for each $14, or $182. This would be an outlay of $2,093, which will probably deteriorate $1,000 during the year. You see, then, that the whole expense of taking away the slops is $5,350. For this work the present contract pays the contractor $12,900, giving him a clear profit of $7,550 a year. The Mayor's salary is a little over half this amount."

"How much was your bid?"

"Eight thousand seven hundred dollars. This would give me a profit of $3,000 a year, which is not excessive."

"Under your bid do you propose to do the work on the same scale upon which it is now carried on?"

"I do."

"And your securities, I believe, are approved by the Board?"

"It couldn't be otherwise when I have such men as Michael Ryan and Joseph Donovan on my bond."

"What do you think will be the result?"

"That I will get the contract."

THE CITY COUNSELOR.

After leaving Mr. Morrissey the reporter called upon Mr. Leverett Bell, the City Counselor, and asked what he thought of the recent rejection of all the bids.

"My opinion is in Mr. Francis' possession. You can see it there."

"I know that. What I mean is this, that there were two points that I want cleared up. You defined the lowest and best bidder to be the lowest responsible bidder, did you not?"

"I did."

"And that the Board might evade the difficulty of choosing between the two lowest bids by throwing out the whole lot?"

"Yes."

"Did the same difficulty exist at the last opening?"

"Let me tell you something. I understand that Mr. Donovan is going to bring suit against the Board, and as I will probably have to defend them, you will appreciate the fact that you can't put me on the witness stand and cross-examine me now. When the proper time comes excellent reason will be given for what the board does."

"At any rate tell me this: In the event that a person who has been honorably and creditably acquitted of a charge which had nothing to do with slips, and who furnishes approved security, makes the lowest bid, will he be the lowest and best bidder?"

"You will have to excuse me again."

"Do you think an award will be made on the 12th of October, or will there be another delay then?"

"I think in all human probability that the award will be made then."

CITY PERSONALS.

Joe Richey, of Callaway, is in the city and stopping at the Planters' House.

Dr. Renick, of the Health Department, is confined to his room with a sore throat.

Charles H. Bellings, paymaster of the St. Louis, Iron Mountain and Southern Railway, returned from down the road to-day.

A. Talmage and Judge Thomas J. Portis left last night for the West to attend to some business connected with the recent consolidation of a half dozen railroads into the Missouri Pacific.

D. L. Reid, the well-known reporter who received severe injuries about a month ago by falling out of a window at 600 Olive, is recovering rapidly and will be out again in another week.

THE grand festival last night at Assumption Hall, corner of Ninth and Sidney streets, and which will be continued to-night, has thus far proved very exciting. Nearly all the prominent aspirants to office were present. The voting for the gold-headed cane to the most popular candidate of either party will be finished to-night, and a most interesting time is anticipated.

City Hall Notes.

The sums paid into the city treasury to-day amounted to $12,903 91.

There were sixteen burial permits issued from the Health Department to-day.

The Mayor's Proclamation.

The Mayor to-day issued his proclamation asking that all business be suspended on Thursday, October 7. All the city offices will be closed on that day.

Cut Six Times.

Sadie Truehart and Belle Scott, two colored young ladies living in Clabber Alley, had a fight this morning. In two minutes after the fight started Sadie was cut in six places about the face, neck, arms and breast. Belle was knocked down and stamped on by Sadie. Miss Truehart had her wounds dressed at the Dispensary and Bell now holds forth in one of the cells at the Third District Station.

Court of Criminal Correction.

Cases of Dan Brothers, assault and battery, and W. C. Robirds, abandoning his wife, were continued generally on motion of the Prosecuting Attorney. Daniel Curtis, accused of cruelty to animals, was discharged. Charles Johnson, petit larceny, was sentenced to one month in the Work-house.

OAKES himself again, 412 Olive street.

Judge Gottschalk.

Judge Gottschalk has positively declined to be a candidate before the Republican City Convention for Judge of the St. Louis Circuit Court. This seems to assure the nomination of Mr. John D. Johnson.

CATTLE—The receipts were comparatively light for the week now ended, and this had the effect of preventing an active market. The bulk of the offerings comprised mainly light and medium grades and this was also a drawback. Towards the close of our review the demand for good and fancy native steers was quite urgent. On Thursday, the opening day of our review, there was considerable "dragginess" in the cattle market and the transfers were light. Total offerings were small and mainly of common mixed native butchers' stuff, as cows, heifers, light steers and Southwest cattle. There were no grass Texans offered, consequently the canners and local speculators had to turn their attention to mixed butchers' stuff, which was slow of disposal at low prices. Buyers were very careful as regards operating. Good and fancy native steers were in fair inquiry and none offered. Stock and feeding steers in light supply and dull. Milch cows with calves slow. One fancy drove of 1,800 ℔s average brought $5 50 per 100 ℔s. Friday—Business dull and uninteresting. The demand from the different classes of buyers was quite fair, and this was especially the case from shippers and exporters for good heavy and fancy native steers. Offerings scant and mainly of common and medium grades of Indian and Southwest stock, and this as a matter of course ruled out shippers almost entirely. Local speculators and the canners were the leading operators, they paying from $2 40@3 35 per 100 ℔s. Stock and feeding steers scarce and not wanted. Milch cows with calves dull. Saturday—Supply scant and not enough to make a market. The few car loads that landed early in the morning found prompt disposal to the Canning Company at strong prices. Notwithstanding the fact that it was the closing day of the calendar week, the demand from the different classes of buyers was quite free and would have ensued had the offerings proved fair and of desirable grades. Monday—The attendance of the different classes of buyers was fair, and, although they wanted stock, still did not appear anxious for purchasers. Local speculators and the canners entered the market early, and readily took the small offerings of mixed native butchers' stuff and paid about the prices prevailing on Friday. Common to fair grass Texans brought from $2 50@3 10, native butcher cows, etc., from $2 25@2 30 per 100 ℔s. There was a string of good wintered Texans offered, which found sale at satisfactory prices. Shippers could not operate for want of stock, and the few car loads offered were readily taken. Tuesday—Local speculators and the canners were the leading operators. The run was light, almost insignificant, and mainly of common to fair mixed native butchers' stuff and a few car loads of grass Texans. The latter found prompt disposal at strong prices, the range being from $2 50@3 15 per 100 lbs. Mixed butchers' stuff a little slow, but by noon the pens were pretty well cleared. The few car loads of medium to fair native steers offered were taken by shippers at $4@4 37½ ₩ 100 ℔s. Wednesday, September 29th, the run of grass Texans was fair, and by 11 a. m. the fifty car loads had all changed hands and brought strong prices, namely from $2 50@3 30 ₩ 100 ℔s. Native cattle in light offerings and mainly of common mixed quality, which was a disappointment to shippers and exporters, as these buyers had fair orders to fill and wanted good to prime and fancy native steers. There was a string of Kansas half-breeds which found prompt sale. Mixed native butchers' stuff dull. Ruling quotations steady.

HOGS—Prices fluctuated somewhat during the past week, but taken all in all desirable grades are now about as high as at the close of our last review. Offerings were moderate and not up to expectations. On Thursday, the market was slow in opening and it was 10 a. m. before buyers and sellers came together. Prices were fully 10@15c per 100 ℔s lower on all grades. Offerings fair and of grades; shippers made fair purchases, taking Yorkers and Baltimores at $4 80@4 90 per 100 ℔s, with bulk of sales at $4 85; mixed packing slow at $4 80@4 85; good butcher and select brought from $5 15@5 30. Friday fairly active and prices were steady on Yorkers, and the fair offerings of those grades found ready sale at $4 85@4 90 ₩ 100 ℔s, with bulk of sales at the latter figures. Mixed packing and heavy butcher hogs were slow at a decline of 5c ₩ 100 ℔s, mixed packing bringing $4 75@4 90 and butcher and select heavy $5 10@5 35; grass hogs and rough mixed slow at $3@4 25 and $4 30@4 70. Saturday offerings light and again mainly of a mixed character. Demand small and mainly for good Yorkers. Grades slow and dull. Values quiet. Yorkers and Baltimores $4 85@4 95; mixed packing $4 75@4 95; butchers' and select $5@5 35; grass hogs $3@4 40. Monday the demand from the different classes of buyers was quite fair, and sellers, seeing this, were stronger in their views and in some instances asked for advances. Buyers objected to this, and as a result the market was slow, although a fair number of sales were made. Offerings moderate and of all grades. Grass hogs dull. Values steady. Yorkers and Baltimore $4 85@4 95, mixed packing $4 80@5, butcher and select $5@5 35. Friday slow and transfers hard to effect. The demand was fair, and sellers asked advances which buyers were loth in paying, and to this may be attributable the dullness that prevailed. The bulk of the supply was mainly of a mixed character. Grass and medium hogs dull. Yorkers and Baltimore $4 90@5; mixed packing $4 80@5 05; butcher and select $5 15@5 40. Wednesday the offerings were light, about seventy car-loads in all, and mainly of a mixed character. Packers and shippers made fair purchases at declines of 5c per 100 lbs on all grades. Yorkers and Baltimores $4 85@4 95; mixed packing $4 80@5; butchers and select $5 15@5 35.

SHEEP—The demand from the different classes of buyers was quite urgent throughout, and the moderate supply barely enough to meet the wants of local butchers. Shippers were, with few exceptions, almost entirely ruled out of the market. Lambs were scarce and wanted. Values a little weaker towards the close of our review.

Quote choice to extra $3 75 to $4; fair to good $3 25 to $3 75; medium to fair $3 to $3 25. Stock sheep $2 50@2 75. Scabby natives and Texas stockers not wanted. Lambs $1 50 to $3 per head.

A SENTIMENTAL GAMBLER.

Some three years ago I ran a high-toned game in a certain place. Oh, you know well enough where it was, for if I ain't in the wrong you owe me now for a stack of chips. It was a square game, you had better believe it. In all the table-drawers in the rooms there were six-shooters handy, and I mostly kept a knife in my boot-leg. Well, it were a thriving game, for I dealt to half the bloods in the town, and often had as many as five lay-outs at a time, with roulette a-going between spells. One evening a young chap, with a curious stare in his face, strolled in, and I concluded right off that he was green. I have an affection for green men. Oh, how I sympathizes with them! He was fair-haired, had blue eyes and milk teeth, and just as innocent-looking as a sucking pig. I knowed he was my meat—tenderer nor chicken—the minute I sot eyes on him. Just one of them lovely creatures as had never put foot in a gambling saloon before. Pity him? Much. If you ever did want to see a heart just slopping over with sympathy, I wish you could get a sight of mine. There never was a sporting man that hadn't a soft heart, mealier nor a biled potato. It's a constant weakness that mostly spoils their business. When I get flush, you just call on me and write me up some yarn for the papers, about these benevolent, soft-hearted spoons, something that will make the women cry, and you will be good for a ten-dollar bill. The papers can't publish too many of them. Well, about this here young fellow. Some pards of mine had roped him in. Bless you, we had spotted him months before. We made up a little game, and some friends played agin me—me a-holding the box—and the way they squeezed me was awful. Pretty soon they got him to take a hand just for fun, he going shares, and chipping in, and we let him make $100 or $150—I disremember how much. We knowed he was well sot. His old mammy had caved in a six months before, and he was good for $40,000. Now we wasn't going to let any other party get him, for there was a lot of fellows a-running an opposition to us in town. We had kind of started small, and the bank wasn't worth more than $800 when we first worked her, and that there young fellow had cost us as much as $150 in tolling of him in, before we got him safe. Some particular friends of mine hived on him, and we stood the racket. I no sooner looked him over than I made up my mind that our money wasn't wasted. He wasn't a growler, but just an easy-going kind of chap, that took things as they come. We didn't press him. If it took the whole season to play it on him, we didn't mind. Some nights he would drop a thousand cool, and the next night we would let him pick up a hundred or so. Kind of kept him in heart, you know. When he begun he wasn't much on liquor, but we got him to take his tod pretty brisk after awhile. Good liquor? You had better believe it. Old Crow, copper-distilled, all the time. What's the use of hocussin' stuff? It's never done now much, excepting by burglars. The nigger was regularly ordered to give him a drink, when any of us winked, and we kept a-winking. A man wants sustaining, you know, and we was a blessed sight too tender-hearted to let him feel his losses. Many and many a time me and my pards have put him to sleep in the back room, with money in his pocket which we might have took, and he never would have known nothing; but a sporting man as respects hisself is above that kind of game.

Well, he kept right straight on like a good one, and the more he lost the worse was his judgment. It was so easy a thing that there really was no fun in it. When spring time came the bank was $30,000 ahead, and the blasted fool hadn't over $100 to his name. We had been mighty polite and affable like to him so far, but when a fellow has only a $100 and a watch and scarf pin, and will keep a hanging around a game, he ain't no use. He kept on a-coming though, and I just knew that if we didn't freeze him out he would turn out to be a regular saloon loafer. One night he come in and hung off for a while, and we thought he hadn't a red, but by-and-by he shows $500. I was kind of curious to know where the money had come from. We laid low for him, and just sucked in his money as easy as could be. Next day we found out that he had kept back some of his money to build a marble monument over his mother, and had had the plans made. But I rather guess the tombstone cutters didn't divy any of that money much, and the old woman ain't got no headstone yet to speak of as I knows of. What's the use of such things anyhow? Then he didn't turn up for a week, and we thought we was shut of him.

One howling bad night when the room was full, and there was no place at a table, he comes in and edges up to where I was dealing. He had pawned his overcoat quite likely, for he was shivering from the rain. He draws a few quarters out of his pocket, but I shut down on him, telling him it was a dollar game and there was no room for him He pulls out his watch and offers it for $75 worth of checks. It might have been worth pretty nearly that for the old gold in the case, but we wasn't pawnbrokers, and so we let him have $50 on it. He took the chips greedily, and two rousing drinks, and played like a fool. What a blasted baby he was! I kept a sloshing over with sympathy for him, of course; but if it was his daddy's ticker, you know, and if the ace will keep turning up agin a family timepiece, what's the use of blubbering over it? It ain't plucky. Next time he hauls out of his shirt a diamond pin and dickers that for a pile of chips. We have to keep our wits about us, you know. It was a fairish stone, and even if we had lost the chips, we wouldn't have been much the worse for it. He would keep on coppering the queen; we knowed his game, and we worked the lady on him, and that there pin was ours. I wasn't going to leave that pin go the rounds, so I stuck it in my scarf between the deals, and, as I sot in there (I was wearing a blue scarf that night), I sort of smiled on him, a bulging out of my chest, so that he could see it, and that riled him. "Now you are done for," thinks I, "and to-morrow I will give orders that you ain't to be let in any more."

I see, though, a gold ring on his finger. It wasn't much in the way of jewelry, a thin, used-up, battered-up kind of thing. If it was 18 karat maybe worth $5. I kind of fancied that ring. If his business was done, it had to be done clean. I knowed he was shorn, and a shorn man hasn't no use for gold rings. He was a fooling with it, pulling it off and putting it on again. Presently it came off his finger and rolled across the baize. He was kind of ashamed to offer it.

"Give you four dollar chips for it," says I; "your girl will give you another."

"It's my poor old mother's wedding ring," says he, "and I dare not."

"Bring you luck," says I; "put up the old woman's finery—if it's gold."

He kind of hesitated, but Jim—that's the nigger—gave him a staving drink, and he chucked over the ring. Mebbe it was the liquor that gave him the hiccups, or it might have been a sob, but he took the chips anyway. I had the ring and felt it. It was so much worn out that I knew we had given more chips for it than it was worth, but as I have been telling you, I always had a heart bigger nor an ox. I had the box, and three cards did his business. He hadn't sense enough to divide his little pile. No spoony fellow ought to try to match themselves with bloods. I got that there ring, and as nice a piece of dry goods as ever stept wears that there ring to-day, providing she ain't pawned it.

He never said a word, but kind of tottered off—it was the drink I suppose—and went into the back room, and we kept on with the game. We was having a staving run of luck that night, and things was a working sweet, when all of a sudden we heard a pistol go off in the back room. I didn't jump. We ain't nervous, and a little popping ain't of much consequence. It wasn't the first time, neither, I had heard a pistol go off in that there back room.

I felt kind of sure it was all up with Greeny, but his watch was in the drawer, his pin in my scarf, and his ring on my finger. There was a lot of big betting on the six last cards, just then fours and fives and nines, and the chance was agin us, and the players was just wild. I dealt 'em, and we swooped the old kaboodle. I am cool if I am anything. Then some of the ropers came a-rushing in from the back-room, and one of 'em says:

"Where the —— did he get the pistol from?"

"Rummaging in the old table drawer," says my pard, a-winking to me, "and it went off without his knowing it. Ain't hurt to speak of."

"Gents," says I, "don't let a little trifle of this here kind disturb this social gathering. Jim, liquor all round. Now shut them doors, lock 'em and fetch me the keys, for not a soul of you gets out before morning, and by that time it will be all right."

The party was game, though they held back for a little while, not knowing what was exactly up.

"He's done for, I suppose?" I said to my partner in a whisper.

"A stiff," says he.

"Carpet spoilt—wall paper splashed?" I asked.

"Just the worst kind."

"Matter of $75. It's my fault; charge it to me. He ought to have been fired out at once; but I always was so blasted sentimental."

"It's your only failing," said my pard.

"Now," says I to the company, "a new deal, gents, on this 'ere festive occasion. Supper at 12 o'clock. Make your bets."

What a night we had of it! That 'ere little incident in the next room had put quite an edge on the thing. The liquor those fellows drank would have floated 'em. Drunk myself? Not much. I never tastes a drop when I handle the kurds. It was one of the best nights for business I ever knew—better than $10,000 for us. We skinned that crowd.

It was brought in as an accident. Mebbe it was—mebbe it wasn't. He didn't pay his funeral expenses. If there had been a man that sold flowers in the place, maybe the bank would have sent him some camelias and things, for I was aways sentimental and soft; but then I had to pay for a new carpet. I have bad streaks of good and bad luck ever since, but I do wish I could strike just such another nice young fellow like greeny. I shouldn't care if one turned up like him once a month. I would treat them all just as handsome.

But say, don't forget to come around and see me, for I want you to write up something gushing about gamblers and lottery-policy people, and how a faro dealer got pious all at once and gave up the pasteboards and took to teaching Sunday school. Yank in remorse and rope in the sentiment. Call the thing "His Last Deal." I'll give you the pints. It's a kind of reading takes. It sounds so true—so like a butcher a-fainting over a lamb. So long.

Kehr, Jas. Bannerman, Carl Danzer, John Finn, Laurence Harrigan, Jos. Pulitzer, Ed. Devoy, John H. Maxon, R. D. Lancaster and C.W. Francis.

A Talk With Senator Vest.

Senator Geo. G. Vest arrived in the city this morning in excellent health and spirits and prepared to excel himself at Armory Hall this evening. The Senator has delivered four speeches in Indiana to immense audiences and will return to-morrow to the battle ground to assist in keeping up the fire until next Tuesday week. A reporter of the POST-DISPATCH this morning met the Senator and asked him how the campaign is progressing in Indiana. Said the Senator: "It is not a campaign. It is war. Never did the people of a State so thoroughly give themselves up to politics as the Indianians have. In the city of Indianapolis, a Democratic mass-meeting is held in every ward every night, and throughout the State meetings are held in every county I think and believe the State will give Landers a large majority. The State is Democratic beyond question. The only danger is that the State will be drenched with money a few days before election, and that business meeting in Philadelphia looks very much as if that was the intention. The withdrawal of a portion of the Greenback ticket from the field has done much to strengthen the Democracy. Words would fail to give an idea of the intense feeling that prevails in Indiana. Every voter in the State is alive to the gravity of the occasion. They came from the country to the towns in swarms and listen to the speeches with attention, and they remain until the night meeting. I stake my judgment upon the result. Indiana will go Democratic."

"What about Weaver's call upon the Greenbackers to stand by their ticket?"

"Weaver has been sufficiently exposed as an emissary of the Republican party. He has received money from the Republican party, and every honest Democratic Greenbacker knows it and looks upon his 'proclamation' accordingly."

Senator Vest, having been for several weeks at White Sulphur Springs in West Virginia, where he met many distinguished Virginians, was asked what effect in his opinion the attitude of the readjusters would have upon the Presidential result. He replied: "The State of Virginia is Democratic and will go for Hancock. Much, however, depends upon the result in Indiana."

AT the grand opening exhibition of Mermod, Jaccard & Co., Fourth and Locust streets, on Friday evening, there will be no goods sold, nor any visitor solicited to buy.

JOHN RUSSELL YOUNG.

The Journalist Who Accompanied Grant in His Tour Around the World in the City.

Mr. John Russell Young and lady arrived at the Lindell this morning, from California. Mr. Young is accompanied by his sister, Mrs. Gen. S. Bright, and is en route to New York, where he will resume his labors on the Herald. He was met by a POST-DISPATCH reporter, and a cursory conversation followed.

Mr. Young declined to speak about politics, saying that he had paid little attention to them lately, and did not feel in a position to express an opinion. In referring to California and the Pacific Slope, where he has been spending a few months, the noted journalist said: "California will be very close, but I think the Republicans have at present the advantage. Garfield made a bid for California's vote in his letter of acceptance by siding with her on the Chinese question. But the question is by no means settled, and the fight between the two parties will be a desperate one. Senator Sharon, of Nevada, is again running for the United States Senate, and for a long time everything looked his way. Fair has come out on the Democratic side, however, and the two bonanza kings will have a hard struggle. I would not be at all surprised if Fair proved the victor."

In speaking of Gen. Grant, with whom Mr. Young made a tour of the world, he remarked that the friendly relations existing between them had never been disturbed. The reason that Grant had refused to be accompanied by a Herald representative on his trip to Mexico was because the gentleman selected was personally objectionable to Grant. Mr. Young said that, though he was well satisfied with being European correspondent for the Herald, he had become somewhat tired of it on account of the foreign manners which associations inculcated, and as he is thoroughly American, he had no desire to become ingrafted with European ideas or customs.

"Journalists in Europe," he said, "are as favorably looked upon as they are here. In England they are not so well known to the public, on account of the papers being more impersonal and secret. In France the profession of journalism is one of the best avenues to position and fame, as each writer affixes his signature to his productions, and through this means becomes known as a political thinker and writer." Mr. Young will leave for New York immediately. He has just met with a sad affliction in the death of his young daughter, who died a few days ago in California.

Robbing an Ohio Farmer.

From the Cincinnati Gazette, 28th.

Three of the most valuable bricks ever seen were on exhibition at the Hammond Street Station house yesterday afternoon. They were the poorest kind of rough building brick, but each of them was worth, or at least had cost one man, $1,166 66 2-3. Their story is as follows:

William Sly, of Nicholasville, Clermont county, where he keeps a store, had been accumulating his savings for forty years until he could count the snug sum of $3,500. This amount he had invested in government 4 per cents, and they would have been in his possession yet drawing their quarterly interest, but in an evil hour he determined to exchange them for gold. With this end in view he came to the city yesterday, accompanied by a son-in-law, whose name was not ascertained. With the bonds in a new black valise, Sly and his son-in-law went to the banking house of H. W. Hughes & Co., 90 West Third street, where the change was made from paper into eagles and double eagles. Sly and his son-in-law, who seemed in this transaction to have been true descendants of Christopher Sly himself, put the money into an empty cigar box which they placed in the valise, and started toward the river to take the train. They noticed several persons in the banking house, but paid no more than casual attention to them. On the way to the river they were followed by several men who walked close to them and jostled them at times. It is supposed these were the thieves who subsequently relieved them of their pile of gold, and that they were then seeking a chance to snatch the valise and run. However, Sly seems to have suspected nothing, and the men left them before Sly and his companion reached Front street. They took the 4:10 train on the Little Miami road, and occupied a seat together. A few minutes afterward Sly left the car to get a newspaper, the son-in-law remaining in charge of the precious valise. The guard's attention was diverted for a moment from the valise which stood on the floor in the aisle, by some incident. There was a hurried movement through the car of a party of men. A few minutes after Mr. Sly's companion noticed that the valise was displaced. He pulled it back into place when a heavy body rolled in it. This alarmed him and looking at the valise he found it was not his. A new but very common looking affair had been substituted for his gripsack. He tore it open and found that it contained nothing but three bricks. To give the alarm was the work of a second, but the thieves were already safe with their booty. All the description Sly's son-in-law could give of the robber was that he was probably a heavy-set dark-looking man who had followed them part of the way to the river. The valise was taken to Hammond Street Station. It was made of paper painted to imitate leather, and the bricks had been thrown in so hastily as to break out the ends in several places. Evidently it had been bought for the purpose after the transfer of the money across the counter, and the thieves put the bricks in to give it the necessary weight, picking them off some pile on their way to the river. The Sly party returned to Clermont county by the next train, and seemed to be in a hurry to get out of Cincinnati while they had their clothes on their backs.

Old Hunters Puzzled.

From the Modoc (Cal.) Independent.

An old hunter writes from Dunn's Cove that he and Mr. Groves, another old hunter, have killed a wild animal unlike anything either one ever saw, and asking information concerning the genus. It measured five feet three inches from one track to the other, its tail about the length of its body, with a bunch of red hair on the tip; a stripe down the back about four inches; deep red stripes running with the ribs; his ears shaped like a hog's, standing straight out; two tusks, two inches long, on each side of his mouth, above and below, and was very ferocious.

CAPT. BRUNER is looking for a boat to take off the Fannie Tatum's freight and deliver it at destination.

THE Gold Dust arrived at 7 this morning and reports water only five feet eight inches with the stick above Cairo. The bars at Cape Girardeau and in the Bee Crossing are also shallow places.

A BOATMAN says: Why is the shore at the Bryan dyke filling up? Is this caused by the ice dyke at the east side of Arsenal Island? If so, what was the use of removing the Bryan dyke? If the city now watches there will soon be a natural shore line that Illinois will not complain of.

EPISCOPALIANS IN COUNCIL.

Second Day of the Annual Convention of the Missouri Diocese.

A Warm Discussion on the Word "Catholic"—Reports of the Officers.

To-day was the second day of the diocesan convention of the Episcopal Church of the State. The clerical delegates assembled at St. George's Church, on Chestnut and Beaumont, at 9:30 o'clock this morning to partake of the sacrament of the holy communion. The regular morning session of the convention was set for 10 o'clock, but the reverend gentlemen were a little slow in getting to work, probably from the long sessions of yesterday, which closed with a handsome reception at Bishop Robertson's residence, 2727 Chestnut street. At the celebration of communion this morning all the delegates were present, as well as quite a number of lay communicants and members of the various Episcopal churches of the city. More ladies were observed than upon the opening day. The services connected with the celebrating of the communion were impressively read by Bishop Robertson, assisted by the Rev. Dr. Fulton, rector of St. George, and especially was the general confession of faith with responses earnestly given. After the solemn oblation and invocation, an appropriate hymn was sung while the Bishop partook of the bread and wine and passed to the other priests and deacons, and then to the general congregation, they kneeling all the time with heads bowed in silent prayer. The ceremony closed with the usual hymn.

Immediately on the close of the communion service the regular business of the convention was proceeded with. The Rev. Bishop Robertson took the chair, and the secretaries, Messrs. John R. Triplett, of Christ Church, and A. Leslie, of Trinity Church, resumed their places. Tables were introduced and the meeting declared by the president ready for business.

AT ROLL CALL,

which took place at about 10:45 o'clock, most of the clerical delegates responded to their names, but the lay delegates were conspicuously absent. A few new delegates were present who arrived from outside districts last night. The Rev. Mr. Austin was added to the roll, the committee on credentials having certified to his identity with the convention.

The presiding Bishop notified all present that they were at liberty to use his library during their stay in the city. Reports of standing committees were then called for, but none were in readiness. The report of the trustee of the permanent fund was called for, but the gentleman having it in charge had left it elsewhere and wanted more time. The standing Committee reported the nominations made during the past year in the State for priestly orders and vacancies filled. The Rev. P. G. Robert made the report, which was quite a lengthy one, with many small nominations. The chief appointment was that of Dr. Fulton to St. George's Church, made necessary by the resignation of Dr. Holland.

The Rev. J. H. Jardin announced that he would offer a resolution similar in purpose to one made yesterday relating to the use of the term "American Catholic Church" in sending a greeting to a Bishop Herzog, of Switzerland. Mr. Jardin's motion only changed the idea of the former motion by leaving out the words "American Catholic Church sends greeting." Objections were made by a number of delegates to this motion, and the president decided that the subject had been settled unless on a regular motion to reconsider. The matter was correctly brought before the house by moving of such reconsideration by Rev. J. M. Curtis, who voted with the majority on the preceding day. Considerable feeling was here displayed and an attempt was made to choke off the vote by various hindering motions. The vote was, however, finally taken by yeas and nays, the members voting with considerable animation. The result was the loss of the motion to reconsider.

The Rev. Mr. Thorpe then offered the following:

Resolved, That this convention hails with pleasure the visit to this country of the Right Rev. Bishop Herzog.

Mr. Jardin objected and held that nothing ought to go out as a vote of this convention in which no mention was made of the creed in which we all believe. Dr. Runzie thought it to be a shame that such trivial matters should be allowed to take up the time of a great convention where souls were to be saved. He moved the subject be laid on the table permanently. It was so ordered. Treasurer Joseph D. Franklin reported the finances of the association for the past year as follows: The assessments made on the various churches of the State amounted in total to $4,498 75. At the last report there was on hand in the treasury $833 09. From proceeds of the sale of a note $1,945 34 was received during the year. The expenses of the year were: Bishop's salary, $3,500; bishop's traveling expenses, $189 73; general small expenses, $364 14; now on hand in notes, $3,538 75. It was moved that the treasurer be instructed to invest all the funds in his possession in good real estate.

The respective amounts of assessments paid in by the St. Louis churches were as follows: Mount Calvary, $2 30; St. Peter's, $100; St. George's, $475; Good Shepherd, $80; Christ, $586; Holy Communion, $420; St. Paul (colored) $18 40; St. John's, $70. There were no delinquents in St. Louis, but many in the State at large.

When the hour of adjournment of the morning session was reached, at 1 p. m., the reports of small committees were still under discussion. The night session takes place at 7:30 o'clock.

THE FLOWER MISSION.

Last Meeting of the Ladies This Morning.

The Charitable Gifts, and How They Were Distributed.

The last meeting of the Flower Mission was held this morning, and the ladies who have participated in the good work during the warm season seemed sorrowful that the approach of winter deprived them of the pleasure experienced in their ministrations to the poor. The room in the office of the Presbyterian Board was well filled, and the long table in the center groaned under the weight of sweet-scented, bright-looking flowers. The Goddess Flora had bountifully contributed, giving her choicest gems, selected from the parent stems, which soon shall droop and wither in the chilling blast of winter. Rapidly worked the deft fingers of the ladies, weaving the flowers and cedar into pretty bouquets, and each appeared to be stirred with a spirit of rivalry as to who should do the most work and make the prettiest collection. In their mind's eye were kept the faces of the poor little children, some of them pinched and wan and others bright and cheery, but all with a glad look and smile as they welcomed the pleasure-bringing ladies of the mission. In the hospitals this morning the orphans whispered of the coming flowers to one another, and glanced at the withered leaves of last week with a sigh of regret that they had faded and withered so soon, but with childlike buoyancy the passing sorrow gave place to a feeling of pleasurable expectancy at the new beauties on the way, to adorn the mantel and the schoolroom. Those who have taken the flowers to the little ones were amply repaid for their trouble by the gratitude beaming from the eyes of the beneficiares and the thankful prattle of appreciative and susceptible childhood. Not one of the ladies who have been identified with the Flower Mission during the past season will refuse to enter it again next year and consent to a deprivation of the happiness experienced through doing a good and charitable act. Companionship with the flowers. Nature's sweet gifts to her children, produces in itself a softening influence, and the inhalation of their fragrance, a kiss of their petals and a glance of their beautiful variegated hues, brings the gentler feelings to the surface and harshness is subdued. The last day of the mission was in every respect as successful as the preceding ones, and Superintendent Jackson expressed himself as highly pleased with the result. The contributions were numerous and very fine.

The following contributed baskets of large, luscious grapes: Miss C. Garrison, Miss Alliebell Hunter, Mrs. George Kingsland, Mrs. Philip Kingsland, Miss Cora Stanard, Mr. A. L. Berry.

The other contributions were: Webster Groves—Miss Carrie Brady, eighteen bouquets of flowers; Miss R. Webster, twenty bouquets; Rosemont Green-house, basket of cut flowers; Willie Jackson, fifteen bouquets; Nettie Jackson, fifteen bouquets; Stella and Mollie Murphy, thirty-one bouquets; Mary Mills, fifteen bouquets; Addie Dennis, fifteen bouquets; Charles Johnson, fifty-two papers.

City—Mrs. J. F. J. Smith, twenty-five papers; Miss Sands, basket of flowers; Miss Armstrong, box of flowers; Mrs. Wallace, bundle of magazines; Mrs. Dayman, basket of cut flowers; Sandover Flower Mission, forty bouquets; Miss C. Netting, of Carlinville, 100 bouquets; Miss Minnie Russell, 250 bouquets. The following ladies took part in the arranging of bouquets and the distribution: Miss Carrie Ferguson, Miss Mamie Ferguson, Miss Jane Peck, Miss Annie Sands, Miss Mollie Slaughter, Miss Kate Ewald, Miss Carrie Garrison, Mrs. J. W. Wallace, Miss Alliebell Hunter, Mrs. J. F. J. Smith, Miss Sadie Morrison, Miss N. B. Dimon, Mrs. D. C Thatcher, Mrs. Joseph R. Finley, Miss Minnie Russell, Miss Ella Gardner, Mrs. J. H. Barnard.

The carriages for taking the ladies to the different places of distribution were furnished by Mrs. Oliver Garrison, Mrs. Henry Platt, Mrs. George K. Budd. The inmates of the City Hospital were presented with 350 bouquets, 100 papers and five baskets of grapes. The Good Samaritan received fifty bouquets.

Mrs. Hugh Crawford will give an entertainment some time next month for the benefit of the poor and orphans, when a full report of the work of the Flower Mission will be given.
